Senate Strips Aid Bill of Surplus Ship Chartering

Action Ends Long Fight by Seamen, Adds Millions to Recovery Plan Cost

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

The first substantial change in the European recovery bill came yesterday when the Senate knocked out a provision to permit the chartering of 300 surplus American ships to Europe.

The change came on a voice vote, with the full approval of Chairman Arthur H. Vandenberg of the Foreign Relations Committee.

It marked the end of an unceasing battle by the maritime unions and shipping companies against the chartering, which they felt would throw thousands of American seamen out of work and do irreparable damage to the merchant marine.

Adds Millions to Cost

Administration sources estimated last night that the change would add more than 200 million dollars to the cost of European recovery, since it would mean paying higher American shipping charges for supplies going to Europe.

They also predicted that it would heighten European pressure for bigger allocations of American steel under ERP, so that the maritime nations of western Europe could carry on their shipbuilding programs. Senators of both parties argued yesterday, however, that the national interest overrode other considerations.

Senator Barkley (D., Ky.) pointed out that it would cost $25,000 to recondition each of the 300 ships for Europe; Senator Connally (D., Tex.) said it would be easier for the United States to control ERP if it also operated the ships; and Senator Brewster (R., Me.), sponsor of the amendment, thought it consistent with the Senate's action last week in providing that 50 per cent of American goods for Europe be shipped in American vessels wherever possible.

Two Amendments Adopted

The Senate also adopted two minor amendments in an effort to clear the decks for a final vote by the end of this week. One, by Senator George (D., Ga.) provided that private channels of trade and transportation be used wherever possible in procuring and shipping ERP supplies. The other, by Senator Cooper (R., Ky.) called upon the rest of the Western Hemisphere to help to the greatest possible extent in supplying Europe.

The biggest hurdle yet remaining is the impending effort, supported by Senator Taft (R., Ohio) to cut the size of the first year's authorization from $5,300,000,000 to four billion dollars. Taft expects to speak tomorrow in what may be the decisive session of the long and scattered debate.

Friends and opponents of ERP joined forces yesterday, however, to

U. S. Population Hits Record High At 145,340,000

The United States population reached a new high of 145,340,000 at the start of this year after 1947 proved the biggest single year of growth in history.

The Census Bureau said yesterday a record number of babies, 3,908,000, were born in 1947.

Continuance of a low death rate and a net immigration of about 215,000 persons also helped the net boost last year.

The 1947 net gain was 2,667,000 persons. That exceeded the previous record increase, attained in 1946, by about 400,000.

The bureau said the United States population increased by 10.4 per cent, or 13,700,000 persons, between April 1, 1940, when the last census was held, and January 1, 1948.

Six Injured In Blast at Photo School

At least six persons were injured last night in a flash fire and explosion in the basement developing room of the National School of Photography, 922 Burlington ave., Silver Spring, Md.

The blast rocked the three-story stone and brick building shortly before 8:30 p. m., shattered windows, cracked walls and did an estimated $1000 damage to the basement. Some 65 students and teachers were in the building.

Silver Spring Fire Chief Charles E. Beffinbaugh said that gas or chemicals used in photo developing were responsible.

He said the fire started near conduits formerly used to support heavy cables in the former telephone building.

Cazimer Gorsky, 36, of 1203 Holly st. nw., an instructor, one of the persons present in the developing room, said: "I saw a sheet of flame shoot past me, and heard a ripping noise that seemed to make the whole building shudder—then everything went blank."

Gorsky and Henry Tobin, 32, of 1224 Blair Mill rd., Silver Spring, student, both suffered second and third degree burns of face and arms. They were taken to Washington Sanitarium, Takoma Park.

Others reported injured were: Joseph Mascola, 640 I st. ne., Edward N. Berquist, Andrews Field soldier; a Mr. Edelman, treated at Walter Reed Hospital, and Chief Electricians Mate Robert Whaley, taken to Bethesda Naval Hospital.

Control Setup At Gallinger Hit by Mason

Commissioner Clears Physicians Accused Of Illegal Admission

By Adrienne Tassler
Post Reporter

Commissioner Guy Mason yesterday cleared Gallinger physicians whom he had accused of conspiring to admit a patient illegally and announced dissatisfaction with Health Department administration of the hospital.

The development, climax of a week-long battle betwen local university hospitals and the District government over control of Gallinger, came after a 20-minute conference with Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of George Washington University.

Gives His Reserves

In exonerating Dr. Brian Blades, chief surgeon at Gallinger and also head of George Washington Hospital's surgical staff, whose ouster the Commissioner had urged Monday, Mason declared:

"I feel I have been given half truths and distorted facts by the health and hospital authorities."

The Commissioner said he had based his attack on Dr. Blades on a report delivered to him by Assistant Health Officer Daniel L. Seckinger "and I'm going to find out about it from him now." The report from Dr. Seckinger, Mason said, resulted from Dr. Blades' recommendation that the Health Department be relieved of responsibility for Gallinger.

Dr. Seckinger could not be reached for comment.

Dr. Effler Named

The original report to Commissioner Mason from Dr. Seckinger named Dr. Donald Effler as the man who had requested the patient's admission to Gallinger. Dr. Blades was mentioned only as the physician who had treated the woman previously at George Washington University Hospital.

Mason, after studying a report from Dr. Marvin, which completely absolved Dr. Blades of blame in the alleged unlawful admission to Gallinger of a nonresident, said he would "not request the removal" of the physician and would "personally apologize to him when I see him."

Simultaneously, Mason cleared Dr. Sol Katz, chief of the tuber-

As Congressmen Wrangle

Oleo Hearing Reminds Witness Of 'Woman's Club Meeting'

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The row over the special taxes imposed upon margarine got so bitter in the House Agriculture Committee yesterday that one member, Representative Charles Hoeven (R., Iowa) urged that the committee fight it out in secret.

Hoeven, pleaded with Chairman Clifford R. Hope (R., Kans.) to "let us iron these differences out in private. This bickering makes us all ridiculous."

The division is between Congressmen from diary districts and those from districts that produce soybeans or cottonseed—the products that go into margine.

Hoeven is neutral. His district produces a lot of butter. But soybeans is its second biggest field crop.

The first half of the battle ended yesterday, when the margarine supporters ended their testimony seeking repeal of the special taxes and license fees margarine dealers have to pay. Today the dairy men take over.

The row reached its bitterest yesterday, just as Mrs. Gertrude Parks of the District of Columbia Women's Clubs took the stand. Mrs. Parks listened for 15 minutes, while Representatives August H. Anderson (R., Minn.) a butter champion, and W. R. Poage (D., Tex.) a cottonseed oil-margarine supporter, argued over who was wasting the committee's time.

"I feel right at home, gentlemen," Mrs. Parks remarked. "This sounds like a women's club meeting."

The bitterness displayed by the two factions has attracted overflow crowds. Yesterday scores of visitors were turned away. Standing room was all gone before the hearing began.

MRS. GERTRUDE PARKS
Was "right at home"

Yesterday's session heard:

1. Andresen suggest that there should be a law requiring a written statement for every customer of an eating house or hospital when margarine is being served instead of butter. "We don't want deception," Andresen pleaded.

2. John N. Hatfield of the Pennsylvania Hospital at Philadelphia, protest against the present law because it requires a hospital to pay $600 license fee annually, in order to serve colored margarine.

"But we serve artificially colored butter" he argued. He said

Meyers Case Expected to Go To Jury Today

Defense, Surprised By Chauffeur's Story, May Not Call General

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

The trial of Maj. Gen. Bennett E. Meyers may end today, on the heels of yesterday's sensational testimony from the retired officer's wartime chauffeur that Meyers offered him $2000 if he would lie to Justice Department investigators.

Calvin Edward Mettee, 30-year-old veteran, told a Federal court jury he had never agreed to take the money, but did agree to lie for the general because "General Meyers was always very nice to me."

Soon after Mettee's testimony the Government rested its case against the wartime AAF materiel chief, who is currently being tried on a charge of persuading Bleriot H. Lamarre to commit perjury before the Senate War Investigating Subcommittee.

Acquittal Plea Expected

Meyers' defense counsel appears ready to close its case today without calling a single witness, even to establish character, a nearly unprecedented move here.

Robert T. Bushnell, chief counsel for Meyers, yesterday began the reading of Senate resolutions in preparing for asking a directed verdict of acquittal on the ground that the Senate War Investigating Subcommittee was not properly constituted and therefore could not administer an oath.

If his contention should be sustained by Federal Judge Alexander Holtzoff, the Government's case,

'Lax' Handling In Condon Case Laid to Agency

Subcommittee Accuses Commerce Official of 'Incorrect' Statement

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

A House Un-American Activities Subcommittee yesterday accused the Commerce Department loyalty board of "laxity" in its handling of the case of Dr. E. U. Condon, director of the National Bureau of Standards.

Further, it declared that Undersecretary of Commerce William C. Foster made an "incorrect" statement when he said the board had cleared Condon of doubts on his loyalty on February 24.

Actually, the subcommittee said, the report was not made unanimous and officially filed until March 1. This was a few hours after the subcommittee had issued its own report charging Condon with association with Russian agents.

The subcommittee made its findings in a two-page statement issued after two days of closed hearings.

Arlington County Board Gets Record $8,380,108 Budget

By Donald Olesen
Post Reporter

A budget estimate of $8,380,108—largest in Arlington's history—was submitted to the Arlington County Board last night for the fiscal year 1948-49.

The budget, on which a public hearing will be held March 29, was split into two parts:

1. The $4,587,813 budget estimate of Conty Manager A. T. Lundberg for general county operation. The sum tops last year's county total by $1,800,213.

2. A request for a record operating budget of $2,444,053 ($716,030 more than last year) frmo the school board, whose budget also includes $1,473,480 in construction funds from a bond issue authorized last May.

In last night's county board meeting, held especially to receive the budget, no action was taken. The figures compare with a total budget the past year of $5,686,872, which included $2,787,600 for county purposes and $1,728,023 for schools.

To meet yesterday's estimated budget top of $8,380,108, it would be necessary to raise the present $3.25 tax rate to $3.75 per $100 of assessed valuation. All of the pos-

Archbishop on Birth Control

Old Boston Families Censured For 'Failure to Reproduce'

Hartford, Conn., March 10 (AP). Famous old Protestant families of Boston and New England have been criticized by a Roman Catholic archbishop for what he termed their failure to reproduce themselves.

The most Rev. Richard J. Cushing, Archbishop of Boston, attacking birth control and the "contraception movement" in a speech before 3200 persons at the National Catholic Family Life Conference here, asked:

"What is to become of our country if the most privileged people in it fail or refuse to reproduce themselves?"

"The Adamses, the Bradfords, the Eliots, the Coolidges, and that distinguished line of Cushings to which I do not belong" were singled out for special mention by the archbishop.

He cited as evidence the Boston telephone directory. It contained, he said, columns of Kelly, Cohens, Kennedys and Sullivans in contrast to a half-column of Eliots. And most of the Eliots, he added, were the "Eliot Garage, Eliot Repair Shop, Eliot Square Fish Market and other such listings."

Czech Regime Is Branded as Reign of Terror By Secretary

Secretary Marshall responded to Jan Masaryk's death yesterday by saying that "a reign of terror" was going on in Czechoslovakia.

He also told a news conference that "passions" in this country over the Czech crisis had created "a very, very serious" situation, and he went to the unusual lengths of letting his somber words be quoted directly.

Direct quotation gave them added emphasis, for the usual rule at the State Department is for only the indirect reporting of what the Secretary says.

Strong Feeling in U. S.

Yesterday a reporter said great fears had been aroused by events in Czechoslovakia, among them fears that communism might win the Italian election on April 18. This was Marshall's comment in reply:

"I think you correctly described the situation in your question—that there are great fears as to the developments.

"There is also a very strong feeling regarding these developments, and a considerable passion of view on the part of a great many in this country.

"The situation is very, very serious. It is regrettable that passions are aroused to the degree that has occurred.

Czech Events Called Tragic

"It is tragic to have things happen such as just occurred in Czechoslovakia, particularly regarding what has happened to some of the officials, as in the affair today of Masaryk—all of which indicates very plainly what is going on.

"It is a reign of terror in Czechoslovakia and not an ordinary due process of government by the people."

He added that the department had no official word of Masaryk's death as yet except from Communist-controlled sources which described it as a suicide.

Asked for comment on the action of Czech delegate, Jan Papanek, in appealing to the United Nations, Marshall said it was refreshing to hear a man say what he actually thinks.

Action Is Demanded

Marshall's concern over "passions" in the United States sprang from two causes, it was learned last night. One was the firm belief of virtually every key official in the department that Czechoslovakia was doomed long before the actual seizure of power by the Communists — doomed, in fact, from the moment the Communists acquired key posts in the Czech government almost three years ago. The department has never quite shared the public alarm over what actually happened two weeks ago.

The other was the sudden rush of demands, from Congress and elsewhere, for hurried action to answer the Communist stroke. Personally and officially Marshall was understood to be against being stampeded into American action based on sudden fright or anger.

Whatever this country does, he was said to believe, should be based on cold calculation.

One reporter reminded him yesterday that some of the "passions" in this country had been stirred up

Delegate's Plea, Blaming Stalin, Is Filed as Not Being Official

Lake Success, March 10 (AP). Czechoslovakia's chief delegate to the United Nations, Dr. Jan Papanek, demanded today the Security Council investigate the Russian-backed Communist coup in his "terrorized" homeland.

The United Nations Secretary-General, Trygve Lie, shelved the demand after a hurried consultation with other high U. N. officials.

These officials included his top Russian and Czechoslovak aides in the cabinet of the U. N. secretariat and Dr. T. F. Tsiang, of China, this month's president of the Security Council.

Lie decided that an 1100-word letter of complaint against Russia from Papanek, containing the call for Council action, was a non-governmental communication.

Will Remain In Files

Under U. N. rules, it thus will remain now in the files unless some member brings it up and calls for action.

Papanek said he decided to spring his surprise action only after the death of Jan Masaryk, his best friend.

Papanek blamed Premier Stalin and Russian officials for the success of the Communist minority stroke last month.

The Czechoslovak communicated his charges in the formal letter to Lie and read them to newsmen in a special news conference.

Papanek, with obvious emotion, declared also:

1. That Masaryk, who died in Prague today, could not have been a suicide. He said the foreign minister, who received six votes on the first ballot for president of the U. N. Assembly in New York last fall, had received a Communist-made bomb in Prague several weeks ago.

Not Resigning U. N. Post

2. That he is not resigning his U. N. post. He said he still is the representative of the Czechoslovak republic and that he does not represent the Communist-dominated regime in Prague. U. N. officials said Lie's ruling has no bearing on Papanek's status as a delegate; that the U. N. has received no instructions from Prague changing Papanek's status.

3. That Russian soldiers were held in readiness on Czechslovakia's northwest frontier to back up the Communists last month.

There was speculation among delegates tonight whether some country would pick up the letter and sponsor it formally.

It was said the U. N. authorities considered this was not a communication from the Czechoslovak government since it contained an attack on that government.

Calls Stalin Insincere.

These developments came quickly after the death of Masaryk, who is remembered here as a wise-cracking but deadly earnest diplomat.

Papanek put the blame squarely on Russia with these words in his letter:

"It is very clear that the coup by the Communist minority by force was effectuated successfuly only because of official participation of representatives of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and because of the threat of the use of military force of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics in readiness on the northwest boundaries of Czechoslovakia.

"Official and military representatives of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics participated in closed and public meetings of the Communist Party and stayed long enough to see organized terror

China Must Get Military Aid, Chennault Says

Communist Sweep In 2 Years Probable Otherwise, He Warns

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chennault, one-time chief of the "Flying Tigers," said yesterday that America must send military aid to China or see communism sweep western Asia within two years.

Failure to act now, he told the House Foreign Affairs Committee, "will inevitably set the stage for World War III."

The grizzled, iron-jawed airman testified for two hours before a capacity audience on Capitol Hill, discussing military strategy and China's place in it—as if that war already was under way.

Difficult to Conquer

His thesis was that the Russians will not launch an offensive war until they are assured they won't have to fight on two "great continental fronts". "Communization of China," he declared, will secure their eastern front and leave them free to act in Europe.

With her great size, rugged territory and poor commnications, China is a difficult country for any power to conquer, either from the north or a seaborne invasion from the east. Yet it is relatively easy (1) to take into the Red camp without American aid, or (2) to keep free and democratic with it, said Chennault.

And, illustrating his points by spacing bomber ranges on a large globe, the general testified that from air bases in western China, bombers could hit Soviet industrial targets easier than from fields in the United States or North Africa.

Policy Stands, Marshall Says

Chennault criticized American efforts to broaden the Chinese government by inclusion of Communists, telling the committee that if Secretary of State George C. Marshall had been successful in such efforts in 1946, "the Chinese government would be Russian today."

Later in the day, Marshall told reporters that President Truman's basic policy statement of December, 1945, still represents American policy toward China. That statement called for a broader Chinese government to include "other political elements" than Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's Kuomintang.

Pope Warns Italians to Vote For Men Who Defend Religion

Vatican City, March 10 (U.P.).—Pope Pius XII today warned Italian Catholics of the "extraordinary importance" of Italy's general election April 18 and said they were morally bound to vote only for candidates who guarantee the "protection of the rights of God and the soul."

The pontiff said the Roman Catholic Church does not intend to involve itself with political parties but that he could not remain silent at a "moment of such great consequence."

He referred directly to the forthcoming national parlimentary election which will be predominantly an issue of communism versus noncommunism.

Speaking as Bishop of Rome to 300 parish priests, the Pope said:

"Without doubt, the Church intends to remain outside and above political parties. But how could we remain indifferent to the composition of a Parliament to which the constitution gives the power to make laws on matters which regard so directly the highest religious interests and conditions of the life of the Church itself in Italy?"

The Holy Father said the present situation imposed two conditions:

"Firstly, in the present circumstance, it is strictly obligatory for

Death of Foreign Minister Called Suicide; State Funeral Is Set

Prague, March 10 (AP).—Jan Masaryk, Foreign Minister of Czechoslovakia, plunged to his death today after staying two weeks in his country's new Communist-controlled cabinet.

An official government announcement said he committed suicide.

The 61-year-old diplomat was the son of a Brooklyn-born mother and a Bohemian father who became Czechoslovakia's first President.

He jumped more than 50 feet to his death on the stone flagging of a courtyard in Czernin Palace, the government announcement said.

Communist Minister of the Interior Vaclav Nosek told Parliament that Masaryk had ended his life after a night of brooding over "tendentious malicious letters and telegrams from his former friends in Great Britain and America assailing him for his manly stand" in remaining in the Communist-led government.

(Prime Minister Attlee said in London Masaryk may have taken his life because "he could not endure to live in the suffocating atmosphere of totalitarianism."

Plain Murder, Tokoly Says

(In Sydney, Australia, Czech Consul K. Tokoly said Masaryk's death "is not suicide. It is plain murder." Tokoly said he was resigning his post.)

Government sources gave this account of Masaryk's death:

He apparently stepped up on a low couch that stood under the window of his bathroom and hurled himself out of the window. He occupied a small apartment in the palace that houses the Foreign Affairs Ministry.

A guard on duty found him lying crumpled on the stones. A medical student summoned from a first aid station in the ministry pronounced him dead shortly before 7 a. m.

No official cause of death was given. A post mortem will be held.

State Funeral Announced

A state funeral was announced for Saturday afternoon, with Communist Premier Klement Gottwald speaking at the pantheon of the Prague Museum in Prague's central square. The body will be taken to Lany, to be interred in the family plot beside that of his father, President Thomas G. Masaryk.

The country mourned the death of the man whose family name was synonymous with democracy. Many Czechs wept at the news. The government ordered flags flown at half staff.

The radio gave out the doleful tidings in short bulletins, broken by the solemn requiem music of the great Czech composer Anton Dvorak.

Masaryk's death recalled that Dr. Prokop Drtina, minister of justice in the previous cabinet with Masaryk, was recovering from head injuries suffered in what police said was a three-story plunge from his villa.

No Word From Benes

There was no word from President Eduard Benes concerning Masaryk's death. Masaryk conferred with the President only yesterday.

The recently purged Parliament met for the first time since Premier Gottwald and his cohorts seized control. A wreath of roses and lilies lay at Masaryk's place on the ministers' bench.

Gottwald made no mention to parliament of Masaryk, whose empty seat was two places away from his.

There were 253 deputies present, including the Premier and his cabinet. The normal seating is 300. There was no clear indication of how many members were present involuntarily.

Masaryk had been ill with bronchitis, and during the crisis which brought the Communists to power had refused to see foreign newsmen.

His last public appearance was Sunday in the old town square, when he attended the combined celebration of the ninety-eighth birthday of his father and the thirtieth anniversary of the Battle of Bachmac, in which Czech

PEOPLE In The NEWS

By Russell Brines

Tokyo, March 10 (AP).—It was a blistering day in February, 1945.

The tall general gazed at the rugged Americans who had just been rescued from Santo Tomas interment camp in Manila. Then he leaned over and handed a chocolate bar to a wide-eyed little girl.

That probably was the closest General MacArthur ever came to publicly kissing babies.

He became a presidential candidate without a flicker from the square-jawed stiffness which has characterized him as a military and occupation commander.

His first act was to tell resident correspondents and photographers they could expect no interviews or special pictures. He said he would not relax his strict rules against family photographs and would not open the privacy of his home to the press.

MacArthur has done things in reverse before.

Conspicuous Without Tie

When he accepted the formal surrender of Japan aboard the USS Missouri September 2, 1945, he attracted immediate attention. It was a day for medals and decorations, and the assembled international dignitaries wore banked rows of them. MacArthur was conspicuous without a single decoration and in a tieless khaki shirt.

He has maintained that plain, severe appearance throughout his command of this gilt-loving nation. This has become a trademark, like the corncob pipe which he still smokes and the battered braid cap he still wears.

MacArthur is a dramatic figure, whether his audience is one man or thousands. His height is enhanced by his rigid military bearing. The sharpness of his face is emphasized by his snapping brown eyes. The thinness of his hair is hidden by careful combing.

When MacArthur begins to talk, the visitor forgets that the general has just celebrated his sixty-eighth birthday or that he has completed nearly a decade of war and reconstruction without a let-down. He is a natural and convincing speaker who fills even commonplace sentences with vitality.

His voice is low and smooth, well suited to radio. It drops lower or climbs to thinness for emphasis. He never gropes for words.

MacArthur usually begins a conversation in his headquarters office by relaxing in a worn leather chair. After a moment, he jumps to his feet. He paces across the room, leans on his massive desk and punctuates his sentences with a forefinger. All the while, he constantly lights matches which go out before he can reach a pause long enough to puff on his pipe.

GEN. DOUGLAS MacARTHUR

Two Allied Foreign Ministers have changed their policies after leaving these sessions. Many other prominent visitors have departed with praise for the occupation. MacArthur likes to talk to visitors. Five-minute appointments frequently stretch into a half hour or longer.

The general also likes to startle guests with his memory. He calls hundreds of acquaintances by their first names and usually manages to add some personal detail.

Demands Absolute Loyalty

He demands absolute loyalty from his staff officers. Many have been with him since Bataan and have remained overtime in Japan to be with him. The "Old Man" has a reputation for firmness but fairness. Officers say he frequently is more lenient with a GI than a regimental colonel might be.

The general appears to draw great strength from Mrs. MacArthur, the former Jean Faircloth of Murfreesboro, Tenn., whom he married in 1937. MacArthur is an indulgent father to their 10-year-old son, Arthur.

The boy is tutored at home, but is active in the Cub Scouts and attends most major sport events with his mother. Mrs. MacArthur frequently represents her husband at afternoon functions, but is never seen without him in the evenings. She remains generally in the background and declines interviews.

MacArthur's principal hobby is reading. He is a deep student of political and military history. He attends regularly the motion picture shows presented in the embassy.

MacArthur frequently dismisses a discussion of his home life with a chuckle and this remark: "Any husband will tell you the wife rules the family."

Jan Masaryk's 'Martyr' Death Stuns Capital

Washington yesterday was stunned by the news that Czechoslovakian Foreign Minister Jan Masaryk had chosen suicide as an end to his varied career.

As belated word was received that the Czech statesman's body had been found in the courtyard of his home, Representative Karl Stefan (R., Nebr.), speaking to the House of Representatives, declared. "The United States had had its martyred Lincoln. Czechoslovakia has its martyred Masaryk."

Dr. Juraj Slavik, who last week resigned as Czechoslovakia's Ambassador to the United States in protest against the Communist coup in his homeland, said yesterday that "Jan Masaryk has proved that the Czech spirit is not dead. His death will set an example for others to live to resist terror and oppression."

Yesterday's grim news was in sad contrast to Washington's memories of the younger Masaryk, whose father had blueprinted Czech plans for freedom. In his youth, Masaryk had "bummed" around in the United States, working for a manufacturing plant first as an iron molder and later as director of social welfare.

Welcomed in diplomatic circles because of his quick mind and genial humor, Masaryk in a visit in 1946 had described himself as a "slightly tired and sad optimist."

In an official statement on Masaryk's death, the State Department declared it "has deepened the shadow cast on the observance a few days ago of the birthday anniversary of his father, Thomas Masaryk, by the extinction of Czechoslovak liberties" that the elder Masaryk founded.

Memorial services will be held for Masaryk Sunday at 3:30 at All Souls Unitarian Church, 16th and Harvard sts. nw. Dr. Slavik and Dr. A. Powell Davies, minister at All Souls who saw Masaryk only two weeks ago, will be the principal speakers. Members of the Diplomatic Corps, Government officials and the public have been invited to attend.

by statements made by United States Government officials.

The Secretary said he was aware of that. He said the Cabinet was trying constantly to correlate official statements and to avoid rocking the boat. An officials checking of Cabinet statements was in force during the war but has since been abandoned.

He was understood to be concerned, for example, by reports that the selective service system was being revived, whereas investigation of those reports showed only that the Office of Selective Service was doing paper planning work.

Marshall had met Masaryk last fall during the sessions of the United Nations Assembly, and before that in wartime. The late foreign minister had a great admiration for Marshall as one of the ablest figures produced by the war.

Before Marshall became Secretary of State, Masaryk told American friends he could not understand why greater use was not being made of such an able man in coping with the international situation.

Diplomats Are Saddened

Diplomats and officials here were saddened by the news from Prague—saddened by the loss of Masaryk and by the light his death threw on present conditions in Czechoslovakia.

As for Masaryk himself, they remembered him as a great-hearted Czech during the war years, a Democrat to his fingertips, and a patriot who had let himself be fatally entangled by the Communists.

Harassed and Haggard

Photographs showed him harassed, haggard and worried in appearance.

Masaryk's sister, Alice, the only survivor bearing the family name, lives in a home near the palace. Another married sister, Olga Revilliod, lives in Geneva, Switzerland.

His mother was an American, the former Charlotte Garrigue of Brooklyn. He was born in Prague, but lived in New York City for a time before the first World War. There he worked as an office boy, plumber's assistant and piano player in a movie theater.

He was born September 14, 1886. He completed his education at Charles University in Prague but studied later in Boston. He visited the United States first in 1907, and worked for Charles Crane of Chicago, father of Richard Crane, who became the first United States Minister to Czechoslovakia.

He married Frances Crane, daughter of Charles Crane. They were divorced in 1931.

Not only was every member of the committee present at yesterday's show, but a dozen other members of Congress showed up as visitors.

Both sides claim they have enough votes to win—each side claiming a 1-vote majority.

Blamed by Jews As Perpetrators Of Street Bombing

Jerusalem, March 10 (U.P.).—Three British constables were caught taking part in an Arab assault today on the Jewish village of Neve y Aacov, a Palestine government spokesman announced. They were seized by British troops.

The Jewish extremist Stern Gang and the Haganah organization immediately accused the three Britons of being the perpetrators of the Ben Yehuda street bombing in Jerusalem last month in which some 60 Jews were killed.

The government announcement said the three constables were "absent without leave," and evidenced extreme concern that their presence with Arab forces would lead to serious repercussions from angered Jews.

Haganah already had plastered the streets of Jerusalem, Haifa and Tel Aviv with thousands of posters alleging that these three constables and a fourth had joined the Arab forces and were participating in attacks on Jewish settlements.

General Urges Aid for China

yesterday afternoon behind closed doors, the House Committee prepared to begin writing their own draft of foreign aid legislation this morning.

Before them is the Senate European Recovery Plan, the Greek-Turkish military aid bill and the Administration proposal for 570 million dollars in purely economic relief for China. GOP members of the group predicted yesterday that military aid for China would be voted, but the question of whether it will be kept separate from ERP still is unsettled.

No Equipment for Long Time

Chennault told the committee that no American military equipment had arrived in China "for a long period" before his departure from Shanghai. The 57-year-old retired American Army officer flew here last week with his 25-year-old Chinese bride.

He now operates an airline in China, which reputedly is partially owned by the Chinese government and has been carrying relief supplies throughout the country.

Some additional American military supplies are being shipped to Chiang's forces, according to a recent State Department announcement. Chennault declared that a much stronger aid program is essential, with American military men assisting in combat areas as technicians and tactical advisers.

1.5 To 2 Billions Over 3 Years

Under questioning, General Chennault estimated that from 1.5 to 2 billion dollars in military aid spread over three years would be enough to assure retention of a "strong anticommunistic force" in China. But he warned the committee his figures were "rough" and might be misleading.

Representative Richards (D., S. C.) quizzed Chennault about his estimates, comparing them with what has been spent under the Greek aid program. He added that "my figures indicated that some 30 billions would be needed to whip the Communists in China."

Chennault depreciated the importance of Greece strategically, and contended that our foreign policy actions and plans are "woefully unbalanced" in favor of Europe. He said he is convinced that "to date" they "have caused the Communist leaders very little if any real concern."

Kingdon Quits Race For Senate in N. J.

Princeton, N. J., March 10 (AP).—Dr. Frank Kingdon announced today his withdrawal as a candidate for the Democratic United States Senate nomination.

The newspaper and radio columnist charged in his statement of withdrawal that "incompetent boss rule of the New Jersey Democratic Party has bungled the political situation so that no real choice can be made by Democratic voters in the primary and every chance of electing a Democratic Senator in November is practically killed."

Labor Revolt on Palestine Squelched in Commons

London, March 10 (AP).—A minor labor revolt against the government's Palestine withdrawal was crushed in Commons tonight.

The House defeated, 240 to 30, a proposal calling for rejection of the entire bill. The proposal, offered by Laborite William Warbey, said the government had "delayed and frustrated" the United Nations plan to partition Palestine.

The bill allows the Government to hand over Britain's Palestine mandate to a U. N. commission by an order in council.

Colonial Secretary Arthur Creech-Jones told the House the United Nations plan was unworkable and emphasized the government would give up the mandate May 15 as planned.

Britain May Cut Movie Import Tax

London, March 10 (AP).—Responsible sources said tonight "progress has been made" toward settlement of the tax dispute which stopped Hollywood film exports to Britain.

These informants, who insisted upon anonymity and gave no clew as to what the nature of any compromise agreement might be, said they were sure Eric Johnston, head of the motion picture association, left today's meeting with Harold Wilson, president of the Board of Trade, "in a more hopeful frame of mind."

A further meeting of Johnston and Board of Trade officials was fixed for tomorrow.

No authoritative support was given to rumors that Johnston and British government leaders already had come to terms on a plan to break the deadlock over Britain's 75 per cent tax on foreign film revenues.

Czech Delegate Demands Probe

take hold of the free democratic Czechoslovak people."

He declared in the letter that the "tragedy of the Communist coup in Czechoslovakia, planned and executed with the help of officials and military of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, reveals the insincerity of Premier Stalin who personally promised President Benes in March 1945 in Moscow, that Czechoslovakia would always be free to develop, democratically internally, that the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics wanted only to have friendly neighbors on all its borders and that their foreign policies would follow a common plan."

Papanek concluded that the violation of this agreement by Russia "shakes the very foundations of peace and security, not only of Czechoslovakia but of Europe and the world."

Papanek told at his news conference of his farewell talk with the foreign minister when Masaryk departed for Prague after the 1947 United Nations Assembly.

Papanek said Masaryk told him he (Papanek) must stay here.

He quoted Masaryk as saying there would be difficult times ahead of us but that Papanek must not give up here.

He cautioned Papanek not to take any action here "'until you can be sure I am no more in the position of foreign minister at least 24 hours.'"

Papanek was asked by a reporter whether he was in reality setting up a Czechoslovak government in exile. He smiled slightly and said that depended on the members of the U. N.

Concerning President Benes, Papanek declared the President was not able to make any public appearances. He said Benes was denied visitors. He said only Valerin Zorin, Soviet deputy foreign minister, had been permitted to visit Benes but that Benes had refused to see him.

Russia Hints Austrian Peace Compromise

London, March 10 (AP).—Russia indicated today she might compromise with western powers on an Austrian peace treaty.

N. P. Koktimov, Russian delegate, told the deadlocked meeting of Deputy Foreign Ministers the Soviet Union "will not insist upon every letter of the Soviet proposal." The four-power deputies have met 74 times without agreement on Russian claims for former German assets in Austria.

A British observer quoted Samuel Reber, United States deputy, as saying the time has come "to build a bridge across the gap" between Russian and western views.

Russian claims include 200 million dollars cash within two years, two thirds of Austria's oil production for 50 years and control of the Danube Shipping Co.

Compromise Likely on Pact

Brussels, Belgium, March 10 (AP).—France, Britain and the Benelux countries worked on a compromise today that would throw their western European union open to all European nations "but with stiff membership requirements."

A British source gave that as the description of the middle ground being sought between the Benelux countries (Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg) and the French-British positions. He said the Benelux countries favored a "select club, while we feel that the more we are the stronger we will be."

The conference, reliably reported to have reached the basis of a military alliance, is working on parts of the preamble and may wind up tomorrow night.

It was believed the "stiff membership requirements" would involve acceptance by member nations of firm democratic principles in the western sense.

The treaty may not be signed before next Tuesday's conference of Marshall Plan countries in Paris as had been hoped. After the work is completed here it will receive a thorough going over in all five capitals before the signing.

Forrestal Acts To End War Plan Deadlock

Defense Secretary James Forrestal acted yesterday to end a deadlock within the Joint Chiefs of Staff on over-all military strategy and give America its first truly integrated war plans.

He disclosed that he had called the joint chiefs for a special weekend conference to resolve some basic differences between the armed services on air power and the wartime roles and missions of the forces.

The commanders of the Army, Navy and Air Force will be asked at the conference to list "those things on which they are in disagreement." Forrestal said he hoped then "to get them to come to an accommodation of views."

"If they don't," he added, "I'll make my own decisions."

Describing the present disagreement as being over "who does what with what weapon," Forrestal made it plain that he favors balanced land, sea and air forces.

There has been some congressional criticism of the defense establishment over the failure to date of the unified forces to come up with a single, integrated strategic war plan.

Forrestal stressed that complete and detailed war plans "written and put on a shelf" were "what put Hitler on his ear" and should not be prepared. He took to task the advocates of "one formula for security"—concentration on A-bombs or air power.

"It is now manifest to all the services that some form of universal military is necessary," the defense chief declared.

Shortly after Forrestal spoke, Chairman Gurney of the Senate Armed Services Committee announced that the group will open public hearings on UMT and the general defense program Tuesday. Secretary of State George C. Marshall will be the first witness.

Another hearing will be held next Thursday, followed by two weeks of daily sessions beginning Monday, March 22. Gurney said the committee wanted to hear all points of view on UMT and suggested that groups wishing to testify should contact them immediately.

Forrestal said that the disagreement between the Air Force and the Navy over their air roles "is not fundamental."

The Secretaries of the Army, Navy and Air Forces probably will not attend Forrestal's conference with the Joint Chiefs of Staff. The latter consist of Fleet Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of staff of the President, Gen. Omar N. Bradley, Army chief of staff; Admiral Louis E. Denfeld, chief of naval operations, and Gen. Carl Spaatz, Air Force chief of staff.

Cousin of Robinson Brought Into Quiz

State Department Official Is Grilled On Presence in Moscow of Kin and Wife

For 40 minutes yesterday a congressional subcommittee grilled a high State Department official about the alleged Communist leanings and the personal associations of a second cousin.

The cousin's trip to Russia in 1934, the cousin's wife's maiden name and the cousin's friends were all brought into the questioning in an effort to show that Hamilton Robinson was unfit to be Director of the State Department's Office of Controls.

Representative Fred Busbey (R., Ill.) persisted with this line of questioning despite a prior protest from Assistant Secretary John E. Peurifoy.

Peurifoy said he was disturbed by "the present tendency to extend the highly questionable theory of 'guilt by associations' to lengths that amount to a travesty of American justice."

"Frankly, gentlemen, I am not worried about my reputation or that of Mr. Robinson," Peurifoy told the subcommittee of the House Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments.

"I am as concerned with the problem of security in Government as any of you," he went on, looking squarely at Busbey across the committee table.

"But I cannot believe that the only alternative is to be swept off our feet by the gossip-mongering and character-assassination which so often accompanies personnel investigations."

Robinson, who has been under Busbey's fire for weeks, is a former Wall Street lawyers from the firm of Sullivan & Cromwell. He came to the State Department late in 1946 on the personal recommendation of John Foster Dulles.

Last month Busbey had released to the newspapers a letter to Subcommittee chairman J. Edgar Chenoweth (R., Colo.) alleging that Robinson should have been removed from office months ago.

"I would like to hear why," said Robinson yesterday testifying under oath at his own request. "I want to know what the charges are."

Busbey replied angrily that he would proceed in his own way. This is how he proceeded:

Q. Now, what is the association between yourself and Mr. Miller? Are you related to a Mr. Miller?

A. He is my second cousin—Robert T. Miller 3d. I would like to start with two flat and categorical statements: First, since becoming director of the Office of Controls I have had nothing to do with him, and second, when I took this job I had no reason to believe he was a security risk. His father is my mother's first cousin. He was best man at my wedding in 1931. He went to Russia in 1934; since he came back I have seen very little of him."

Further questioning developed that Miller had worked at odd newspaper jobs during five years in Moscow, had later worked for the Office of Inter-American Affairs and was moved into the State Department in 1945, leaving there before Robinson was appointed to his present post. The questioning went on:

Q. Have you ever met his wife? What was her maiden name?

A. Jennie Levy.

Q. Did she work for the Moscow Daily News?

A. I understand that she did.

Q. Would you say he was a Communist?

A.—I'd hate to charge anyone with being a Communist just from dinner conversation.

Q. Was a sister of Miller's wife one of the people discharged from the State Department for security reasons?

A. I think I'd better not answer. We've made a pretty strong business at the State Department of not discussing names in these matters."

Previous questions had brought out Robinson's record before joining the State Department—graduation with honors from Princeton, a year at Oxford, a degree from the Yale Law School, employment with Sullivan & Cromwell, legal work for the British purchasing mission in 1941, and finally Army service as assistant chief of the management division under Gen. Brehon Somervell, with a Legion of Merit at the end.

Busbey asked to see the FBI report on Robinson at the time he entered the State Department, and Peurifoy gave it, leaving it to the committee to publish the file in the record if it wished.

The Assistant Secretary, in a prepared statement, pleaded for handling the Robinson matter "in a way which will not leave indelible blots on the reputations of individuals who do not have equal opportunity t odefend themselves."

He recalled that it was investigators' practice "to record all information, regardless of its authenticity, to make in available for the man who makes the decision."

"But responsible administration requires the person making the decision to appraise all the evidence—the bad and the good," he went on, "before casting the shadow that will follow the suspected person—and his family—through the rest of his life."

CIO Orders Council Line-Up

By the United Press

The CIO yesterday gave its 397 subordinate councils and their officers 10 days to toe the line in support of the Marshall European recovery program and against Henry Wallace's third party.

John Brophy, national director of the councils, notified them in a letter that it is their "obligation to take a forthright stand in support of national CIO policies on these issues." He said the national organization would not permit "evasion or compromise on this score."

A source close to Brophy said the CIO official's letter was addressed to all the subordinate councils, but actually was aimed at half a dozen so-called dissidents among the bigger city and State groups, which have ignored or rejected CIO policy.

Brophy pointed out that the councils are subsidiary organizations of the national CIO and subject to its rules which prohibit activities or statements contrary to national CIO policy.

Capture of Szepingkai Denied by Nanking

Nanking, March 10 (AP).—A government military spokesman said today Szepingkai remains in National hands, despite pro-government press reports that Communists captured the city.

"As a result of enemy gunfire, Szepingkai's airport has been destroyed," said Maj. Gen. Chang Lu-shih. "Consequently, government forces concentrated their strength for the defense of Szepingkai's outskirts. Hostilities are still going on."

Szepingkai is 105 miles northeast of isolated Mukden.

Anti-Truman Bill Due in Va. Senate Today

Richmond, Va., March 10 (AP).—The Senate committee on privileges and elections deferred action on Governor Tuck's anti-Truman bill today until 10 a. m. tomorrow after receiving a number of suggested amendments.

Committee members predicted that the bill would come out of committee virtually unchanged tomorrow and be presented immediately for action on the Senate floor.

A number of amendments were offered by "friends" of the bill to:

1. Print the name of the national party nominee on the ballot without forcing his supporters to put him on the ballot by petition.

2. Require that petitions be presented to the board of elections 60 days prior to the November election rather than 30 days to give the board time to check the accuracy of the lists. A companion amendment would require the petition signers to list their voting addresses on the petition to facilitate the check.

Poll Tax Hearings Won by Southerners

Senate Rules Group Votes Public Airing; Other Delays on Civil Rights Front

The Senate Rules Committee yesterday yielded to Southern demands for public hearings on anti-poll tax legislation, as Capitol delays developed all along the civil rights front.

The Rules group voted 5 to 2 to hold hearings previously by-passed by a three-man subcommittee, after Senator John C. Stennis (D., Miss.) appealed to the committee.

Stennis said he made the request "at the express direction" of 21 Southern Senators. Later he invited the Governors and Attorneys General of seven Southern poll tax states to testify at hearings opening in about ten days.

Antilynch Bills Delayed

Across the Capitol, meanwhile, it was learned that antilynching legislation, originally scheduled for House consideration in mid-March, will not be called up until next month. Leaders attributed the delay to the heavy pressure of other business and predicted the bill will pass the House "in due course."

Republican over-all strategy appeared aimed at keeping alive the Southern revolt against the President's civil rights program, without diverting the attack to their own party.

Following Stennis' plea to the Senate Rules group, Senator William F. Knowland (R., Calif.) made the motion for anti-poll tax hearings. Voting with Knowland were Senators Henry Cabot Lodge (R., Mass.), Theodore F. Green (D., Vt.), Carl Hayden (D., Ariz.) and Stennis.

Voting "No" were Senators William E. Jenner (R., Ind.), subcommittee chairman, and Irving M. Ives (R., N. Y.). Chairman C. Wayland Brooks (R., Ill.) did not vote. Brooks told newsmen hearings will start in about ten days and two days will be allotted each side.

40 Not Members Then

Jenner recently had refused subcommittee hearings on the ground Congress in the past had "thoroughly explored" the subject. Stennis told the group no Senate hearings have been held since September, 1943, and 40 members of the present Senate were not members at that time.

Stennis told the committee the bill "raises Constitutional questions of the most serious and far-reaching consequences."

Contending that the bill "simply passes the buck to the Supreme Court," he argued that the proper course would be submission of a Constitutional amendment to the 48 States. He said many proponents of the measure concede "the bill is either unconstitutional or its validity extremely doubtful."

"Secondly, everyone has to vote according to the dictates of his own conscience. Now it is evident that the voice of conscience imposes every sincere Catholic to give his own vote to those candidates or that list of candidates which offers truly sufficient guarantees for the protection of the rights of God and the soul, for true, good individuals, families and society, according to the laws of God and Christian moral doctrine."

Although he addressed himself mainly to Italian Catholics, he stressed his responsibilities as the "pastor and common father" of the world's 350 million Catholics.

The pontiff also criticized the emphasis of modern youth on physical things and rebuked motion pictures for their "vision of criminal passions and monstrous crimes."

Dewey's N. H. Showing Points To Him as GOP's 'Man to Beat'

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York remains the No. 1 contender for the Republican presidential nomination, "the man to beat" at Philadelphia in June.

His showing in the Nation's first primary election in New Hampshire, where he captured six delegates as against two for Harold E. Stassen, caused little surprise here. He had been the betting favorite in the Ganite State from the outset.

The next primary battle comes April 6 in Wisconsin, where 27 delegates to the Philadelphia convention will be at stake. In 1944 this preconvention test was a crucial one. Wendell Willkie, failing to win a single delegate, was blown out of the campaign; and from that point on, Governor Dewey was "in" so far as the GOP nomination was concerned.

This time the entries in Wisconsin are Dewey, Stassen and Gen. Douglas MacArthur, who announced early this week that he was a receptive candidate. Dewey, since he will be far from home base, might possibly survive a beating by MacArthur. Stassen, however, almost certainly will have to make a good showing to stay in the race. The Badger State borders on his own Minnesota, and it was in Milwaukee that he formally opened his drive for delegates last November.

Conceivably, the Philadelphia convention will give little heed to the outcome of the various primaries, fall into a deadlock, and then nominate a dark-horse candidate. It happened that way in 1940, and many expect that it will happen again in '48, with Senator Arthur Vandenberg of Michigan, perhaps, carrying off the prize.

The question, how do war veterans feel about General MacArthur? was answered in part yesterday. They appear to be divided.

Leaders of the Oshkosh, Wis., chapter of the Rainbow Division, Veterans of World War I, said they would support MacArthur. The famous soldier served in France with the Rainbow in 1917-18.

In Chicago, eight former service men set up an organization known as "Veterans Against MacArthur." Paul Berger, spokesman for the group, said that "at least 500 former service men" had pledged their support within a few hours.

Berger criticized MacArthur because of his "general aloofness from the people, his use of violence in 1932 to halt the veterans' march in Washington, his censorship of the press in Japan and the evidence this gives of anti-Democratic leanings."

In Cambridge, 57 Harvard students, all veterans of World War II, who served in the Pacific under MacArthur, formed a club to oppose the general's nomination for President.

The group published an advertisement in the Crimson, undergraduate newspaper, which proclaimed:

"Not one veteran's vote for 'Fighting Doug' MacArthur."

Reverting to the New Hampshire primary, the Dewey forces hailed the outcome as a concrete proof of their man's strength with the voters.

Said Herbert Brownell, jr., of New York, one of Dewey's managers:

"Governor Dewey's fine victory in New Hampshire starts the 1948 presidential race. It greatly increases the lead which Governor Dewey already held according to popular opinion polls."

Stassen, in a statement issued from his headquarters in Minneapolis, said:

"We made a strong showing in this first inning, but not quite strong enough. Our attention now shifts to the important second inning in Wisconsin."

Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.), a leader in the Stassen-for-President movement, said that Stassen's showing against Dewey in New Hampshire was "phenomally good."

"I feel that I can safely predict," McCarthy said, "that Gov. Dewey, after his showing in New Hampshire, will withdraw from the Wisconsin and Oregon races."

McCarthy said he didn't believe "anyone could survive a bad defeat in Wisconsin."

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) one of the five Republican candidates for the presidential nomination, said the New Hampshire results were "about what was expected."

Complete Returns Show 6-to-2 Margin for Dewey

Manchester, N. H., March 10 (U.P.). Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York won by a 6-to-2 margin over Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota in their first duel for delegates to the Republican National Convention, unofficial complete returns from the New Hampshire election showed today.

In the Nation's first presidential primary, Dewey gained three of the four delegates-at-large and three of the four delegates selected from the State's two congressional districts.

Three delegates pledged to Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower despite his refusal to run trailed badly in the voting.

Robert O. Blood, favorable to Dewey, 27,983.

Gov. Charles M. Dale, favorable to Dewey, 27,770.

Robert W. Upton, favorable to Dewey, 20,948.

Foster Stearns, favorable to Stassen, 20,802.

Virgil D. White, favorable to Dewey, 10,714.

William G. Saltonstall, favorable to Stassen, 9827.

Charles A. Holden, favorable to Dewey, 8873.

Charles M. Mills, favorable to Dewey, 8430.

Senate Group Clears Way for Tax Cut Bill

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The Senate Finance Committee last night cleared the stage for quick approval of a 4½ to 5 billion dollar individual income tax reduction, with a new schedule of percentage tax cuts.

Hearings closed late yesterday with a final chorus of business pleas for prompt tax relief. A closed meeting of the committee was called for this morning to start writing the bill.

Members of the committee were pretty much agreed in advance on paring the House-approved 6½-billion-dollar tax cut between 1½ and 2 billion dollars and on where the pruning will be done.

Percentage Changes Studied

Major changes will be confined almost entirely to the House bill's percentage cut schedule. This now ranges reductions from 30 per cent in the lowest income brackets to 10 per cent in the highest. The Senate idea is to approximately halve the total percentage reductions with adjustments keeping the relief distributed about as it is in the Knutson bill.

Thus, instead of a 15 per cent range of cuts, exactly half of the Knutson rates, the committee may come up with something like a 20 to 5 per cent range.

That's because a straight down the middle halving of rates would leave the Senate revision subject to the charge that it gives the very low income brackets even less of a break than the House measure.

Colin F. Stam, congressional tax expert, has prepared a varied series of rate schedules from which the committee can pick and choose, it was learned last night.

The committee is expected to aim at keeping 70 per cent of the relief in the brackets under $5000, spreading the balance in brackets above that. Knutson bill relief was proportionately distributed about the same way.

Committee sentiment also appeared to favor making the cut retroactive to January 1, 1948, as it is in the Knutson bill.

No changes at all were contemplated in these other Knutson bill provisions:

1. Split income tax privileges for husbands and wives in all States. This privilege is now confined to married couples in a dozen community property States.

2. A straight increase in individual income tax exemptions from $500 to $600.

The Knutson bill also extends the splitting principle to estate and gift taxes. There was some Senate committee talk of making this privilege retroactive, but a majority apparently opposed such a change.

Before hearings closed, Emil Schram, president of the New York Stock Exchange, J. Cameron Thomson of Minneapolis, representing the Committee for Economic Development, and R. W. Courts, Atlanta, speaking for the Investment Bankers Association, protested the present high level of tax rates.

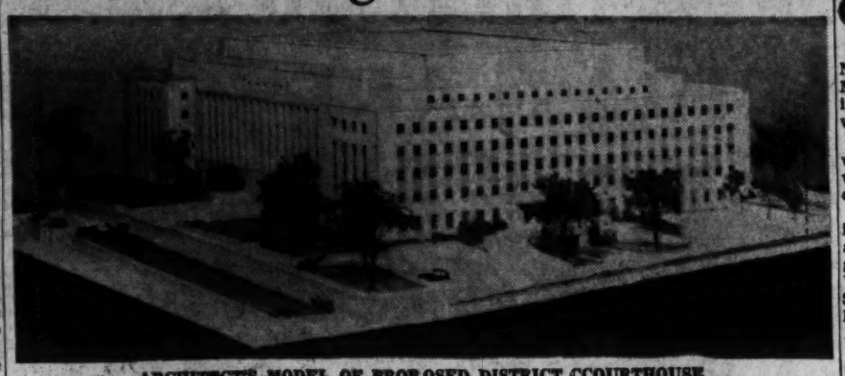
Schram said there is "an alarming shortage of risk or equity capital" and said the present tax structure squeezes the venture investments which business requires.

He asked the committee to make a "substantial" cut in personal income tax rates and indorsed without change House provisions raising individual exemptions $100 and granting split income tax privileges to married couples in all States. He also recommended a cut in the capital gains tax and exemption of corporate dividends paid to individuals from the individual income.

Thomson recommended any 1948 tax cut be given in the form of bonds, keeping cash collection at the present rates. Under present conditions he said it would be taking "unwise inflationary risks" to make a tax reduction of any great size in cash. Under Thomson CED plan, present tax payments would continue but individuals at the end of the year would receive a nontransferable refund bond from the Treasury equal to the amount of their tax cut. Thomson declined to recommend a definite tax reduction figure but said one of two to three billion dollars "would be appropriate if 1948 cash expenditures approximate the President's estimate."

Courts, like Schram, urged the capital gains tax be cut to 12½ per cent and recommended a 50 per cent limit on the individual surtax rate. Largely due to high tax rates, he said capital for investment is becoming scarcer and scarcer. He said corporations may have to increase debts to an unsound extent because individuals can't supply risk capital.

Court Building Bill Introduced



ARCHITECT'S MODEL OF PROPOSED DISTRICT CCOURTHOUSE

Congress yesterday received legislation to authorize building a new $18,665,000 Federal Courts Building at 3d st. and Constitution ave. nw.

Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.) and Representative George Dondero (R., Mich.) introduced the legislation in the Senate and House.

The building would be a massive structure, seven stories high, occupying most of the square bounded by 3d and Constitution, John Marshall pl. and C st. nw.

Chief Justice Bolitha J. Laws of District Court took the plan to the Capitol for the six-member committee set up by Congress last year to prepare it. Senator Cain made public the detailed floor plan for the Courts Building drafted by Architect Louis Justement, 2011 K st. nw.

20 Courtrooms Provided

They showed there will be 19 courtrooms for the District Court, and one for the United States Court of Appeals for the District. Each courtroom will be two stories high. For each of the trial courtrooms there will bea an adjoining jury room, and a cell for prisoners. The courtrooms are stacked up through the center of the building—all interior rooms—with the outside ring of rooms mostly devoted to office space.

Here is the floor-by-floor layout as shown by the plans:

Basement: Seven lockups for male prisoners, two for women prisoners with a matron's office adjoining; four interviewing rooms near the cell blocks; locker rooms and showers for building employes; a pistol ranger; photo darkroom, and fingerprint room; a cafeteria and kitchen, and a garage.

First floor: Probation, United States Marshal's and dusbursing offices; files of the District Court clerk and register of wills; naturalization office; a public health service unit; civil action docket room, and in the southeast corner the counter for marriage licenses.

Second floor: Seven courtrooms of the District Court and quarters for as many District Court justices; offices for the register of wills, bankruptcy, domestic relations, and mental health staffs.

U. S. Attorney on Third Floor

Third floor: Offices of the United States Attorney for the District and his staff; three grand jury suites; law library; assignment commissioner.

Fourth floor: Seven more District courtrooms and quarters for seven justices; the jury commission, auditor, court reporters, press rooms, and separate lounges for lawyers, jurors and witnesses.

Fifth floor: The Court of Appeals room, and quarters for its justices and clerk; also a judges' library, and judges' dining room.

Sixth floor: Five District Court courtrooms, and quarters for five justices.

Seventh floor: A total of 16 rooms for jurors to stay in when juries are kept locked up overnight. These line the north end of the floor.

Expensive Materials Avoided

Justice Laws said every effort had been made to avoid lavish use of expensive materials. The building will take up most of the square, but there will be parking space outdoors for some 80 cars, and grass and plants will be used around the building.

An old brcik pavement, apparently the surface of an abandoned street, has been found by drillers boring into the courthouse site.

Some 6 or 7 feet of fill covers the old pavement, which was found in several of the 28 holes being drilled to check the soil composition there for construction of foundations. John C. Merrill, assistant district manager of the Raymond Concrete Pile Co., said the borings at the four corners of the lot have already reached 100 feet.

So far, they have found "both good ground and bad ground," and a few boulders, but "mostly straightforward soil."

De Valera Pays Washington Overnight Visit on Way West

Eamon De Valera, native of New York City and former Prime Minister of Erie, wrinkled his toes in his pullman slippers and smiled wistfully at the assembled press.

He told them that he really would like to see what Washington was like, but that he hadn't had a chance.

The Irish leader, whose belief in his ideals has taken him in and out of prisons and through great personal dangers, was in Washington yesterday en route to San Francisco, where he will be honor guest at the St. Patrick's Day parade on March 17.

At a press conference in his suite at the Statler, De Valera was asked whether he thought Ireland would remain neutral in the event of a future world war. He answered that "any nation, large or small, will only go into war when it is forced to do so."

Although he was dressed in somber black, and was in the middle of two days of almost continuous public appearances, De Valera was in a cheerful mood as he talked to the press on general subjects. When he mentioned the present world situation, however, he described it as "terrifying" and declared it seems to be "hard to avoid a war."

De Valera arrived in Washington by train yesterday, and was met in Union Station by Sean Nunan, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of Ireland to the United States, and a huge delegation including representatives of five local Irish organizations.

When he reached the concourse at the station, he was greeted by approximately 100 cheering boys, members of the senior class at Gonzaga High School, who sang "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling" as he boarded a limousine bound for his hotel.

Later, De Valera met briefly with Secretary of State Marshall, paid a 15-minute courtesy call on President Truman, at which he told reporters politics was not discussed, and attended a private luncheon at the Blair House.

After yesterday's press conference, he held a public reception, and last night attended a dinner at the Irish Legation. He is scheduled to leave Washington today by plane. He will stop at Tulsa, Okla., and then proceed to the West Coast to participate in the March 17 parade.

Girl Cites Threat After GI Shooting

Vienna, March 10 (AP).—A 19-year-old Austrian girl, her face still swollen from the blow of a Russian gun butt, said today she underwent grueling questioning by the Russians after her American companion was shot in the back by a Soviet sentry.

Red-haired Elfriede Elias said she was seized by the Russians while trying to give first aid to Pfc. Jack Grunden, 18, of Portland, Oreg., the unarmed American who was beaten and shot in a scuffle with Russian soldiers Sunday night.

She said she was taken to Russian headquarters and questioned three times by Russian officers before being released Monday night.

Given Warning, She Says

Miss Elias said she had signed a statement dictated by the Russians, and was warned:

"If you tell another story to the Americans later on, we will find you, wherever you are, and then you will see what happens to you."

Her story of the incident, as told the Associated Press, has been confirmed by Grunden. This is her version:

Three American soldiers were walking with their Austrian girl friends along the sidewalk of the parkway bordering the Grand Hotel. Pfc. Joseph Harper (address unavailable) and his girl were leading. Following at some distance were Pvt. Samuel Adelman of Baltimore, Md., and his girl. Grunden and Miss Elias were some 30 yards behind.

A Russian soldier, apparently off duty, ordered Adelman off the sidewalk into the gutter. Grunden saw the argument and rushed up. At the same time a Russian sentry rushed over from the front of the hotel.

Grunden Struck on Head

The sentry attempted to hit Adelman in the groin with the butt of his rifle. Grunden tried to wrest the weapon away. Grunden was struck on the head with the gun and knocked to his hands and knees. The Russian then shot him in the back.

Harper and his girl raced to the American-occupied Bristol Hotel and called for the International Military Police patrol and an ambulance. When the police arrived, Miss Elias was trying to give first aid to Grunden. She was grabbed by a Russian captain and hustled toward the Grand Hotel.

The Red army newspaper in Vienna, Oesterreichische Zeitung, gave the Russian version today.

The newspaper said the three Americans were trying to force their way into the Grand Hotel. It said they "dragged the Russian sentry 10 feet from his post," and that the sentry then acted "in full accordance with his instructions."

Condon Case Laxity Alleged

in which members of the loyalty board and other Commerce officials were questioned.

Representative Richard M. Nixon (R., Calif.), acting as chairman of the subcommittee, also announced yesterday that open hearings on Condon would be held in two or three weeks.

The time will depend, he said, on when Representative J. Parnell Thomas (R., N. J.), chairman of the full Un-American Activities Committee, is able to be present. He is now recuperating from an illness.

Nixon said some 20 to 25 witness, "and perhaps more," will be called. Condon will be one of them.

Earlier in the day, another member of the subcommittee, Representative John Rankin (D., Miss.), persuaded the House to expunge from the Congressional Record remarks made on Tuesday attacking the committee.

The comments to which he objected were certain insertions which Representative Adolph J. Sabath (D., Ill.) had added to a speech he had given on the floor of the House. Arguing against a further appropriation to the committee, Sabath inserted in his remarks for the Congressional Record a column written by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt and some other printed material.

Rankin termed them additions "most inexcusable" and "most vicious." He asserted that Mrs. Roosevelt has "done more harm than any women who ever lived since Cleopatra." She had written in her column that the committee was "unjust and really subversive" in handling its affairs.

Failing to demand the floor in time, Sabath was precluded from speaking on Rankin's motion before a vote. It was 144 to 35 in favor of striking out his remarks.

Later Sabath told the House he was sure the members would not have voted as they did had they read his speech. And Representative Toby Morris (D., Okla.) warned that it would be "a sorry day" for the country when one member could gag another's expression of opinion.

Yesterday subcommittee statement contained these points:

1. Foster was incorrect, in a statement he issued the evening of March 1, that the Commerce loyalty board cleared Condon on February 24. Actually, Nixon said, only two of three board members had signed the report by that time.

After the subcommittee charges were made, one member, Adrian Fisher, telephoned the third member, Joseph M. McDaniel, jr., at Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill., and received permission to sign the report for him. Then, and not before, it was filed with the Secretary of Commerce.

2. All witnesses, on instructions from Commerce Secretary Harriman, refused to divulge the contents of a letter to Harriman written last May 15 about Condon by FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover.

3. In its 19 months of consideration of the case, the board heard only one witness, Condon.

4. The findings of the loyalty board were limited entirely to the "individual loyalty" of Condon and no finding was made on Dr. Condon's "alleged associations and indiscretions" or whether he constituted a "security risk."

(In his original statement, Foster had stated that the board's scope was exclusively limited to the question of whether there were any reasonable doubts as to Condon's loyalty.—(Editor's note.)

5. While the board had the case under consideration, no steps were taken to deny Condon access to top secret or classified data. He was allowed to attend a secret meeting at Oak Ridge, Tenn., a principal installation of the Atomic Energy Commission.

"This is only one example of the laxity which characterized the entire proceedings of the Commerce Department Loyalty Board in the Condon case," the subcommittee statement said.

Nixon pointed out that although minutes had been kept of other meetings of the loyalty board, none were kept of the February 24 gathering, at which two members of the board said they signed the complete report.

Nixon was asked if he was implying that there never was any such meeting. Nixon said he refused to draw any inferences. There was no written record of the meeting, he said, but it had been testified to by the two members, Fisher, and Oliver C. Short, Commerce personnel director.

Commerce Department officials last night gave this explanation of the circumstances:

The report had been agreed to, though not formally signed, some time before a final board meeting on February 25 (the date originally announced, February 24, was said to be an error). Fisher, leaving his job at Commerce to become general counsel of the Atomic Energy Commission, was anxious to finish the case. He and Short signed the report.

McDaniel had left the department before the February 25 meeting, to take a teaching position at Northwestern, but was, and is, in the status of a department consultant. The loyalty board secretary was instructed to obtain his signature to the report.

Before he got in touch with McDaniel, however, the House subcommittee issued its blast. Thereupon, Fisher called McDaniel for authorization to affix his name to the loyalty document.

Typographical Decision

Admittedly the determination of proper application of the Taft-Hartley Act to specific labor disputes is a highly complex and difficult business. There is good reason why the National Labor Relations Board should not be stampeded into sketchy or inconclusive decisions on such matters. Nevertheless, because of its crucial position as the interpreter of how the Taft-Hartley Act is to affect the industrial economy, the NLRB also has an obligation to avoid all unnecessary delay in announcing its decisions. This is particularly true in cases such as the complaint filed by the NLRB general counsel against the International Typographical Union on the basis of an unfair labor practice charge made by the Baltimore Graphic Arts League. For in a very real sense the decision in the Baltimore case will be the bellwether for the entire printing industry.

Since December 19, when oral argument and final briefs were completed, the case has been in the hands of the NLRB's chief trial examiner. He must announce his recommendations before any further action can be taken. If either party to the dispute takes exception to these recommendations—as is almost certain to happen—then the case must go before the National Labor Relations Board itself for a final ruling. Thus a long road is ahead even if the examiner should make his report immediately. Meanwhile, a large and important segment of the printing industry is in the process of being tied up on issues directly related to the Baltimore case. In addition to the strike of composing room employes on Chicago newspapers, which has been in progress several months, commercial printing establishments—Chicago's largest industry—are now being closed down. In Philadelphia there is a general strike of commercial compositors, and a similar situation is imminent in New York. The shutdown will have an acute effect on national magazines and has ominous implications for all other industries that in any way depend on printing.

The time already elapsed in this case seems a reasonable period in which to formulate basic conclusions. Irrespective of what decision is reached, it is imperative for the interests of employes and employers alike—and indeed, we believe, for the general welfare—that the NLRB make up its mind quickly.

Masaryk

There are some mysterious circumstances in the official story of the suicide of Jan Masaryk at Prague. He was killed, it appears, by a fall from the window of his office in the Foreign Ministry, which is two stories above a courtyard. Thus if it was really an act of suicide, we may suppose it to have been the result of impulse, rather than of premeditated plan. The probabilities of being killed in such a plunge seem no greater than the probabilities of merely being painfully injured and perhaps permanently crippled. This is proved by the case of Dr. Prokop Drtina, Minister of Justice in the Czechoslovakian cabinet which resigned on the eve of the Communist coup. Dr. Drtina, who jumped from a third-story window of his suburban home, was injured severely, but not fatally.

If we are to assume that Mr. Masaryk and Dr. Drtina chose this method of attempting suicide because no other means were available to them, we must also assume that they were in some sense prisoners. Thus the statement by the Press Bureau of the Communist government that Masaryk "killed himself voluntarily," becomes somewhat suspicious by the very inclusion of the italicized word. The suspicion is fortified by knowledge of the practice of the Communists, who, wherever they have taken over control of a country, dispose sooner or later of every political figure around whom an opposition might conceivably develop.

And yet it seems evident enough at this point that Masaryk was worth more to the Czechoslovakian Communists alive than dead. His apparently docile acceptance of the new order gave it some degree of prestige. That is to say, while the Communists were in the process of consolidating their power, Masaryk, with his illustrious name, would have been useful to them as a puppet or front.

In the absence of further evidence, then, we may surmise that Masaryk threw himself out of the window to escape from some intolerable emotional or phychological strain. This tension may have resulted from the realization of the humiliating position in which he had been trapped, or from his effort to resist pressures applied to him by his Communist masters, or merely from remorse and chagrin at this inevitable consequence of the ambivalent policy he had pursued, as between Russia and the western powers. Mr. Masaryk belonged to a genus of statesmen, familiar enough in our time, which believes that it is possible to move simultaneously in opposite directions. In this case, when confronted by the necessity of an irrevocable choice, Masaryk delayed until choice was no longer possible.

Business Outlook

The flurry created by the sharp break in grain prices last month has subsided, and market analysts are beginning rather cautiously to appraise the effect of this sudden localized storm on the general business outlook. Most of them agree that the recent drop in food prices has been a healthy development and discount fears that the drop in grain prices presages a general business recession. Generally speaking, the views expressed reflect a conservative optimism. That is, the belief seems to be generally entertained that we have reached, possibly left behind, the peak of the postwar inflationary boom, but are in a position to effect adjustments to somewhat lower price levels without seriously slowing down business activity.

There are strong arguments to support the conclusion that consumer buying, which is the mainstay of prices, will prevent any sort of price collapse in the near future. As Professor Sumner H. Slichter points out in a current Survey of Our Economy: Pluses and Minuses, no general weakness in agricultural prices is likely—especially not in meat and dairy products. For, he says, expenditures are still low in relation to the money supply. And many important commodities, including some agricultural commodities, "are far below their peaks of the first world war or its aftermath," while hourly earnings are twice as high as in 1920. Moreover, there is no danger that our export trade will collapse, as it did when prices plunged downward in the early twenties. The Marshall Plan is a guarantee against that.

Of course differences of opinion exist about the inflationary or deflationary significance of numerous factors influencing the business outlook. For instance, Lionel D. Edie, writing in a well-known New York market letter, expects a decline in general business toward the end of this year, brought about by reductions in capital outlays, whereas Professor Slichter, stressing the huge size of accumulated needs of business for plant and equipment, concludes that even a moderate business recession would not result in cancellation of orders for equipment.

Differing views are also expressed regarding the outlook for wage increases and the effect of such increases on prices and business activity. On the one hand it is argued that wage increases at the present time might have a deflationary effect, since they would compel some industries to seek ways of cutting costs. On the other hand, such increases are defended as a means of sustaining shrinking consumer purchasing power. The actual effect of higher wage payments on prices and sales will obviously depend to a large extent upon the nature of the industry concerned—whether the products it offers for sale are scarce or relatively abundant.

However, there is a widespread belief that wage increases this year will be more moderate than they otherwise might have been owing to the recent price drop—not because that drop has been reflected in any marked decline in living costs, but because it has resulted in stiffened resistance on the part of employers and induced an attitude of caution and restraint on the part of employes. A qualification of this statement is provided by the ill-timed rise in some steel prices. This has provided labor with fresh ammunition for pressing demands for substantial wage increases, so that the prospect of moderate concessions that would not result in further price increases is less hopeful than it has been.

But, in spite of cross currents that make prediction hazardous, the fact that the country has come through a sharp price adjustment apparently unharmed is regarded as a hopeful indication that further adjustments can be made from time to time in the price and production structure without involving us in the dreaded deflationary spiral that heretofore has been the aftermath of business booms.

Beating Communists

Some practical instruction in dealing with Communists was offered in a recent issue of Collier's Magazine by a young man, Walter P. Reuther, who has had a wealth of successful experience in the field. Mr. Reuther, it will be remembered, emerged as undisputed head man of the powerful UAW-CIO after a bitter preconvention campaign in which Communist elements within the union made him the target of an unbridled smear attack. He had much to do with leading the auto workers into an adult and effective support of American foreign policy, the Marshall Plan in particular. The story of how the Commies were beaten in the UAW reads, as Mr. Reuther puts it with justifiable pride, "almost like the report of an experiment in creative democracy, and provides a demonstration of techniques which can be applied in the larger struggle to save democracy in the world."

Mr. Reuther has no easy formula. He advocates alertness, education and, above all, "the momentum of a positive democratic program." Exposure of Communists, in his view, is a great deal more effective than repression. "You can't beat communism," he says, "by throwing embarrassing questions at witnesses in a congressional hearing. You can't slug it to death with a club or a slogan. You can't burn it at the stake. You have to show it up in the market place of ideas, expose it by honest dealing. Communism breeds on hunger, poverty, human insecurity."

Mr. Reuther won his victory where it really counts. It is at the grass roots that communism must be checked. The Commies themselves have always understood the importance of the labor union movement for their cause and their objectives. The proponents of democracy must understand this, too—leaders of industry no less than leaders of labor. Communism won't be overcome by legislation or by police persecution. "There are quack cures for communism," Mr. Reuther warns. "Hitler cured it by killing the limited democracy of the Weimar Republic. Mussolini stopped it by throttling Italian freedom." In the United States, let us hope, we shall do it by simple application of the democratic process.

Anti-Discrimination Bill

The reporting out of Senate committee of the anti-discrimination bill gives the Republican Party an opportunity of living up to its platform pledge to assure equality of economic opportunity to Negro Americans through "the establishment by Federal legislation of a permanent Fair Employment Practice Commission." The Republicans, when they were in the minority in Congress, merely wrung their hands piously while Democrats from the deep South kept FEPC legislation bottled up in committee. Since they have been in control and unable to dodge responsibility, they have hitherto seemed bent, even in an election year, upon showing themselves to be impervious to their promise.

Senator Ives, co-author of New York State's sensible and seemingly successful anti-discrimination law, introduced the bill in the last session of Congress. It modified earlier FEPC proposals, provided extensive conciliation machinery to precede enforcement in conformity with the New York prototype, and in general sought to reconcile the differences of men of good will respecting this important piece of social legislation. His bill was indorsed by the sponsors of the earlier FEPC legislation, Republicans and Democrats alike. But in some of his colleagues' eyes it remained guilty of the unforgivable sin of promising to prove effective. They will be satisfied with nothing that is not altogether hortatory.

An anti-discrimination law without provision for enforcement would be quite meaningless. Education is, to be sure, of vital importance in bringing about the tolerance which, in the long run, is the best guarantor of equal employment opportunities. It should not be forgotten, however, that the example of the Federal Government is a potent factor in the educative process. So long as the Government condones job discrimination by failing to move against it, the public can scarcely be blamed for supposing it to be a permissible practice. In these days of stress the bill seems to us to be just as urgent as the executive order was in wartime.

Security Dismissals

Civil Service Commissioner Arthur S. Flemming told the Senate Armed Services Committee that the summary dismissal powers in security cases sought in behalf of a number of specially sensitive agencies would afford them too much peacetime authority and suggested what seems to us a thoroughly intelligent modification. The State, Army, Navy and Air Forces Departments and the Central Intelligence Agency and Atomic Energy Commission now have temporary authority summarily to fire persons deemed security risks, without review or any right of appeal. Proposed legislation would make this authority permanent. How gravely it can be abused was manifested not long ago in the case of the 10 State Department employes fired on security grounds and later, after sober second thoughts, allowed to resign without prejudice.

Commissioner Flemming urged that the heads of the six agencies be given power to suspend employes summarily on security grounds; that any suspended employe be given a detailed list of charges together with the right to reply to them; and that any employe dismissed be afforded a right of appeal to the Civil Service Commission, which could certify him to a nonsensitive job in another agency if it considered him sufficiently trustworthy. This procedure would realistically safeguard security in the sensitive agencies (suspension removes a suspect quite as effectively as dismissal), while allowing opportunity for investigation and review before irreparable damage was done. It seems a course far more consonant with American ideas of fair play than arbitrary discharge which may ruin an employe without giving him any chance to defend himself.

The procedure recommended by Mr. Flemming has another practical aspect to recommend it. Undoubtedly, employe morale in the six sensitive agencies would be bolstered by it. For nothing tends to undermine the merit system and the personal sense of job security, which is indispensable to good work, so much as fear on the part of Federal workers that they are liable to be ousted at a moment's notice on mere suspicion. It is heartening that the Senate group is undertaking to rewrite the legislation in the light of Mr. Flemming's recommendations.

ABODE

You praise these narrow bones that build my wrist,
With lingering finger-tip attest the fine,
Consummate craftsmanship of their design—
You, better schooled than the anatomist.
Slowly your hand explores the intricate mesh
Of branching veins, those contours which reveal
How delicate as foam, how strong as steel
May be this living edifice of flesh.

And yet more strong the dweller who resides
Within this house and waits beyond the sill,
Who, knowing walls will crumble and be wrecked,
Has found the only shelter that abides
To roof us over, warm, enduring still,
Framed by the Everlasting Architect.

Synthetic Fuel

Much publicity has been accorded to the atomic age and what it means to man. However, very little importance by comparison has been accorded to oil. If this cold war we are now experiencing turns hot, this country will be caught with a very serious shortage of oil that will cripple our mobility and our ability to produce the tools of war. In fact, we are in a much poorer position today with reference to our stockpile of oil than we were with natural rubber at the beginning of World War II. No American taxpayer, realizing when looking backward, what an important part synthetic rubber played in our fight for survival, has ever criticized the millions of dollars spent for its development and manufacture by our Government.

I believe we should now start to develop and build large-scale synthetic fuel plants, to augment our natural oil supplies. Cost of such an undertaking should be secondary to the obvious justification. If anyone has an illusion that the oil in the Middle East will be our reserve in time of war, he needs just to look back to 1942 and recollect how quickly and easily Japan closed our natural rubber sources in the Dutch East Indies. To get closer to home, we also spent millions of dollars in our own back yard building the Alaskan highway during the last war in order to combat the Japanese submarine menace, so effectively sinking our ships carrying war supplies to our Alaskan and Aleutian outposts.

The time to act is now. Congress should realize that these large synthetic fuel plants will not appear by magic overnight when they are urgently needed. It will take months of study, fabrication and building to place them effectively in operation.

British Accent

As the father of a happy wife of a former American soldier, may I be permitted to comment frankly upon the interesting and kindly article on British war brides which appeared in Section IV of The Washington Post of March 7? I am confident that the writer and Americans in general do not for a moment appreciate the minor but nevertheless unnecessary irritation provoked by the burlesque of the so-called British accent.

To write of the English bride's special thrill when her American child says he's "two and a half" instead of "two and a hawlf", is an unnecessary travesty, and Americans might care to measure this in reverse—the child says he's "two and a haff" instead of "two and a half."

It would be provoking to make any comment on the origin of the English language, but there is still place, I feel, for an Englishman to say that few, if any at all, persons of any education from England or Britain would talk of "half" as "hawlf," whatever that may mean. If the concern is about the use, in southern England mainly, of the long "a", and the pronunciation of "half" as "harf" where the northern English and Scottish, like as not, use the short "a" and speak of "half" as "haff" in the pattern of the Americans, then we are all in good company.

It is only in the American "funnies" that I have seen mention of "pa" and "paw", and spelt out like that, where the English would use the long "a", and say what sounds like "par". Where the "hawlf" emerges, I do not know. We have in America "paw" for "pa" and Utaw for Utah as well as Arkansaw for Arkansas, but after all that is another matter entirely. BRITISH FATHER.

Radio Editorials

Concerning the right of radio owners to editorialize, it amazes me to know that they would even consider such a thing. Admittedly the radio station owners are running their stations for profit. Their income is the money received from their advertising sponsors. As soon as a station is known to represent a given policy, automatically that station's listening public will be greatly reduced. If and when the radio owners begin to editorialize they will surely find a considerable drop in the amount of money they will make from advertising.

Many people will not look at a newspaper which upholds a policy contrary to their liking. These are the people who will not tune in on an opposition radio station.

Arms For Greece

Recently I received a letter from my brother-in-law, Dr. Christos A. Kopsidas, member Chamber of Deputies of Greece. He asked me to bring it to the attention of the press. A literal translation follows: "Here the general condition is worsening. It seems our friends, the Americans, are playing with us. Weapons are necessary to bring order here, and we are not receiving any. However, automobiles and other useless articles abound. Our people beg for guns and we are unable to furnish them. Unarmed, helpless, they watch as the guerillas enter their villages, kill, plunder, kidnap their wives and children and take forced recruits to the mountains with them.

"Rightfully, we should be amply supplied with guns, ours won during the Albanian campaign. These guns, taken from us by the Italians and Germans, were captured later by the Americans and should have been returned to us.

"In 1916, for reasons of their own, the Allies saw to it that Greece was supplied with guns. In 1940, Greece was attacked on one day by Italy and the following day guns arrived from the Allies. Was the emergency greater then than it is now? Are not the arsenals amply supplied? Is it not to the interest of the Americans to help Greece in her battle against the Slavs? If the answers are 'yes' then send us guns."

"Antilynching Bill"

Generally we find ourselves in substantial agreement with The Washington Post editorials on questions of civil and human rights. However, we take sharp exception to your editorial of March 2 on lynching in which you describe the Case antilynching bill as "a sorry anachronism" because the "lynching menace has already been put down."

From beginning to end the editorial shows a truly remarkable lack of understanding of (1) the prevalence of lynchings or threats of lynchings, and (2) the deadly strictures they produce in the economic, political and social life of not only the majority of Negroes in the South but also of an increasingly large number of well-intentioned whites.

Public lynchings by large crowds with great publicity have been the exception rather than the rule in recent years. The technique has changed. Today these terrorists operate in small bands with secrecy and dispatch. Every year many Negroes in the South simply "disappear." The Federal Government has no authority to investigate these cases; local officials won't.

Local law enforcement officers have developed a sort of personalized style of lynching. Drew Pearson, in his column of March 1, gave three typical cases arising in a Mississippi town in February. We have similar recent cases from other Southern States in which the officer tries to justify cold-blooded killings on the all too usual ground that the Negro prisoner tried to overpower him.

The Washington Post makes capital of the fact that there was only one known lynching during 1947. It does not seem to understand, however, that the reason there were probably not many more is because Negroes, knowing that they are without Federal protection, refrain from exercising basic civil rights which will incur the wrath of the anti-Negro forces in the South.

The public press has given wide publicity to the fact that not one of the 400 Negro registered voters in Wrightsville, Ga., dared cast a ballot in the county primary election on March 3 after the Ku Klux Klan had paraded the night before and Grand Dragon Green had declared that "blood will flow." Not so widely known, however, are instances such as that which occurred in Smithville, Ga., on January 28, where a representative of the State Legislature stood guard at the polls with a shotgun and threatened "If a Nigger votes in this election, he'll be a dead Nigger." Our informant, who does not want his name disclosed for fear of his own safety, wrote, "I am a white man myself, but I see in this kind of thing a threat to my own rights, for as long as a man at the polls with a gun can keep one man from voting, he can keep any man from voting."

The scar that a previous lynching leaves on the economic life of the Negro is usually deep and lasting. Let me cite an example. In the 1940 presidential election, a few Negro citizens of Brownsville, Tenn., attempted to vote. The body of one of them was found a few days later in the river. Several others "disappeared." No one was prosecuted. Four years later, the National Labor Relations Board scheduled an election in a certain plant in Brownsville to determine whether the employes desired a labor union to represent them. All of the nonsupervisory employes were Negroes. The night before the election the chief of police along with other prominent local citizens visited the Negro employes most active in organizing the union, told them that a CIO union was not wanted in town, and warned them that there might be a repetition of the 1940 lynching. The next morning not a single employe showed up to cast a ballot.

The Washington Post was unstinting in its praise of the report of the President's Committee on Civil Rights. Yet oddly enough the heart of the committee's recommendations dealt with strengthening the right to safety and security of the person. It summed up the present situation in the following words: "The threat of lynching always hangs over the head of the Southern Negro; the knowledge that a misinterpreted word or action can lead to death is a dreadful burden."

The Washington Post is either for civil rights or against civil rights. And if it's for, then it must perforce favor the Case antilynching bill.

Pre-Easter Auguries

By Malvina Lindsay

Clothes Dilemmas

EASTER BUYING, now slowly getting under way, should provide two clews to the future. It should indicate whether or not deflation is getting the upper hand psychologically. It should forecast how far American women will go in throwing functionalism in clothes to the wind.

At present it looks as if this Easter season would be another cautious one—as was last year's. It looks as if there would be many women in short skirts and let-down hems, many men in last year's suits in the Easter parade.

When it was announced several months ago that clothing would be higher priced this spring because of rising production costs, there was much speculation as to how customers, already plagued with astronomical food budgets, would take it. Apparently they aren't taking it—at least not on the chin.

Men are reported especially price-resistant. An increasing number won't pay more than $50 for a suit. The popular $35 prewar suit now sells around $55. Men's suits are up $3.50 to $5 over last fall, and men, for all their pretended indifference to shopping details, now finger price tags as critically as do their wives.

DESPITE the deluge of spring fashion shows and the mobs of women who attend, a slump has hit the dress manufacturing business, due partly to high cost of fabrics—though the cold weather and a late buying season are chiefly blamed by merchants. Ten thousand garment workers in New York were recently reported unemployed.

Price resistance, which had already hit luxury goods, has extended to medium and lower priced garments. Home sewers are making a phenomenal run on fabric departments. This development is being closely watched by economists since it is generally believed soft goods would lead the way in any recession or "readjustment."

One reason many women on low incomes will be going without the new look this spring is that wartime prosperity made them more selective. Now they balk at taking the inferior garments. Yet the high cost of food and other essentials has curtailed the money they can spend on clothes. Milliners complain that women want a $10 hat for $2. Hat sales have been in a slump, but may pick up as Easter nears since many women regard a new hat as their most important style gesture.

The clothing industry has been hopeful the commodity price drop would release more dollars for Easter finery. But it recognizes that customers are in a penny pinching mood. Though high employment continues, the average breadwinner earning around $50 a week is hard put to it to provide necessities for his family. No wonder he is causing worry to dealers whose inventories are mounting.

ON TOP of all this the trend of women's styles continues toward garments that require r d-age (also petticoats), m a-tion, more wo...ful i-ticality. Paris, which is ed with occult power in setting future trends, has been showing garments with stiffened linings, voluminous skirts, crinoline underpinnings; clothes that have bulk and weight, that are difficult to keep clean or pack. Modifications of these are beginning to show up in American clothes adding both to their cost and inconvenience.

Since for several decades the trend in clothes here has been toward the lightweight, the comfortable, the practical, the question arises: How strong a hold will the present trend, in view of its cost and trouble, get on American women?

If history is any judge, the grip will be strong enough. Fashion researchers have found that styles basically are little influenced by practical needs of the day. The prosperity of the 1920s saw women wearing about the skimpiest clothes they ever donned. The depression of the 1930s saw skirts getting longer and fuller.

During the elaborate period of dress of the middle nineteenth century women set off in covered wagons to pioneer in the West, and during the Civil War did men's work at home. It is safe to predict that, in this Easter parade they will—if they can scrape up the money—appear in costumes that proclaim a languor seemingly unfit to cope with postwar realities.

Closer Shooting War

"The shooting war comes closer," says Marquis Child in his column of March 3. Mr. Childs is right, and I hope he will continue to be a "voice crying in the wilderness" in regard to our danger from the Soviet Union.

Stalin has undoubtedly picked out this year to consolidate his position because he thinks we shall be too busy with our presidential election to even notice what he is doing. Under all the circumstances the presidential election is a matter of only secondary importance. Defense against communism is first in importance. Let us put first things first.

Even at the risk of seeming tiresome, I hope Mr. Childs will tell us "again and again and again" about the danger we are now facing. Then I hope others will take up the crusade and warn the people while there may still be time.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Election
VI. The Main Issue This Year

THE BURDEN of this series of articles has been that the main question is whether the Republican Party will organize itself on a postwar, rather than on its prewar, position. This is the issue between Taft on the one hand, Dewey, Vandenberg and Stassen on the other. The difference is not absolute and exclusive; Taft is not wholly unreconstructed, nor could it be said of the others, or indeed of any human being, that he is wholly adjusted to the postwar situation. But on the whole Taft is by deep and honorable conviction a prewar Republican. In an administration formed and led by him the new Republicans, though recognized, could not be of the inner council and have his full confidence.

Lippmann

AS BETWEEN the two parties it is fair to say now on the basis of what is now known and can be foreseen that if the Republicans unite as a postwar party under the leadership of the Dewey-Vandenberg-Stassen combination, they are likely to win. Without a doubt in this way they are the most likely to win.

For the Democratic Party under Truman draws its principal strength from widespread doubt and uncertainty, especially among the younger men and women, as to whether the Republicans can be trusted to govern in the postwar world. After 16 years a change of party control is in order. The change would be voted, I think, if the country were persuaded that the Republican Party has been reconstructed. That is what the polls reported when they showed that Truman can beat Taft but that he could not have beaten Eisenhower, and that as against Dewey, Stassen, Vandenberg he is losing ground.

THE REAL issue in short is not this measure or that, this policy or that, but whether or not the Republicans can form an administration for the postwar period. For on measures and policies the divisions of opinion run through both parties, not between the two parties.

It would be difficult to name an important issue on which the united Republicans take one side and the united Democrats the other. Certainly there is no party issue on foreign policy, or on national defense, or on labor, or on inflation and deflation in the business cycle. The real difference between the postwar Republicans and the Democrats under Truman is between a fresh start under a new administration and continuing with an old Administration, that can no longer make a fresh start.

ANY PARTY that is long in power tends to become the prisoner of its own past. Moreover, as time goes on the avenues of advancement to the top become clogged and closed, and the party ceases to recruit and promote the ablest of the coming generation of public men.

This happened to the Republicans in their 12 years of power. By 1932 the Democratic Party, which was submerged in 1920, had become the party of the new men who had no future in the Republican Party. It was not the New Deal which attracted the new men but rather, it seems to me the new men who, coming into power, improvised the New Deal.

A SIMILAR development, quite normal in a two-party system, is now taking place, I think, in the Republican Party. There are many more new and rising men among the Republicans than among the Democrats. One can see that by noting how meager is the choice of available and qualified Democrats for the vice presidential nomination. To man an administration the Democrats have no such variety of choice as the Republicans have among their candidates for President, their new Governors and their new Senators and Congressmen.

These are the real indications in a two-party system of government like our own that the country is turning from the Ins to the Outs, that a change of party control is in the making.

IN AN earlier article of this series I gave some reasons for thinking that this change of party control would have taken place earlier, certainly at the last election, but for the altogether abnormal circumstance that the election had to be held at the climax of the war. This meant the fourth election of Roosevelt and after his death a Democratic Administration which is accidental, and never has had a true mandate from the people.

I myself believe, though few may agree with me, that a very large part of the tension, and indeed hysteria, is due in the last analysis to the fact that on the one hand the Truman Administration has no confidence in itself because it was never really elected, and on the other, that the will of the majority was frustrated in 1944.

AS A result the Truman Administration has oscillated insecurely between imitating the conservative Republicans and the Roosevelt New Dealers, combining on the whole the less attractive features of both. And the Republicans, denied by circumstances the power which would otherwise have been theirs, have been deprived too long of the experience of responsibility. Thus altogether too many of them are still fighting Roosevelt and Harry Hopkins and the New Dealers of 1936 instead of making up their minds about 1948 and what lies ahead.

Pattern Of Error

IT OFTEN seems as though this country were fated to go on repeating a pattern of error—and this when the margin for error has been reduced to the vanishing point. Consider China.

Childs

No one disputes that some kind of positive action by America in China is essential, but when it comes to proper approach to that vast chaos-ridden country, then the pulling and the hauling begin.

We see furious partisans of China—American partisans—rushing into action. Lieut. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer embraces China at the strategic level. The missionary crusader, Representative Walter H. Judd of Minnesota, embraces an idealized China on a high moral level.

These volunteer policy-makers proclaim that the Nationalist China—the China of Chiang Kai-shek—is essential to us. We need that China, they say, in accents ranging from the urgent to the shrill and hysterical. They are not, of course, the only partisans to embrace China. There are others with a more practical and profitable motive whose self-interest is too obvious.

The parallel with Greece is striking. Just a year ago, President Truman went before Congress to appeal for aid to Greece and Turkey. His appeal was couched in much the same terms used today by proponents of aid to China.

It was a three-alarm fire. Greece was essential to the United States. Greek democracy must be preserved at any cost—to us.

GIVEN THE political situation in Washington, with an opposition Congress containing a hard core of old-time isolationism, perhaps this approach was necessary. But the effect in Greece was most unfortunate.

The politicians in Athens, who are as sharp as they come, understood how we had committed ourselves to them. In proclaiming that Greece was vital to American security, the Government had attached no conditions to the aid to be given.

Consequently, it has proved extremely difficult to bring about any changes in the regime in Athens. After prolonged and patient prodding by the American administrator, Dwight Griswold, the liberal leader Themistocles Sophoulis was accepted as Premier. But what this change really meant in the way of wider acceptance by the Greek people is still a question. Some observers believe Sophoulis is a prisoner of the Royalist Party of Foreign Minister Constantin Tsaldaris.

Today the Royalist Party press attacks the United States in almost the same language used by the Communists—as imperialist intruders. It is more or less spelled out that the United States needs Greece more than Greece needs us. No one should be surprised, since that's what President Truman in effect told the Greeks a year ago.

NOW, GREECE is a small country in a key area. Its population is something more than seven million. A mistake there was not irretrievable. A great deal has been learned in the Greek experiment.

China, however, is another matter. Some 500 million people, most of them living close to the survival line, occupy the great expanse that is loosely called China. A mistake committing us irretrievably to the present regime could have the most disastrous and far-reaching consequences.

While no such comparison can be valid, there is some reason to believe the Chiang-Kai-shek regime is more corrupt and has less popular support than the group in power in Athens a year ago. Conditions must be attached to any aid given to Chiang Kai-shek.

Reforms must at least be undertaken in good faith. Otherwise any United States aid will be thrown away. Not even in Nationalist China will it help to win the mass of the Chinese people.

There are warning signs which must not be ignored. Some weeks ago anti-British riots occurred in Nanking and other cities. The easy thing was to dismiss these as Communist-inspired. But the British did not try to disguise the fact that these demonstrations could not be so lightly dismissed. They came out of deep resenting of foreign exploitation and doubt of a government that seemed to lean on foreign support.

The question of what can be done for Nationalist China should not be fought over in partisan politics. Of primary importance is the reconstruction of that area where American interests are immediately, directly and vitally concerned—western Europe. Anything that diverts attention from that vital goal serves by that much to weaken America's position in the world.

14 N. Y. Papers Vow to Publish If Strike Comes

New York, March 10 (AP).—The Publishers Association of New York City said printers on 14 major daily newspapers in the city may strike after midnight March 31 but "we shall continue to publish our newspapers."

The association made the statement as it filed charges of unfair labor practices against New York Typographical Union No. 6 and its parent, International Typographical Union (AFL).

The charges were filed with the regional office of the National Labor Relations Board by the association's vice chairman, William Mapel.

In its statement, the association said "in every one of a series of meetings running from February 5 to yesterday, the union has refused to join with us in negotiating a one-year contract completely within the law."

The newspapers involved are Herald Tribune, Times, News, Mirror, Journal-American, World-Telegram, Post-Home News, Sun, Long Island Press and Star-Journal, Brooklyn Eagle, Journal of Commerce and the Wall Street Journal. The Post-Home News is considered two papers.

The newspapers have a combined daily circulation of more than six million copies and a Sunday circulation of more than nine million, the association said.

The association statement said that "we are convinced that under threat of expulsion by the international, our composing room employes have been forbidden to bargain in good faith with us for the kind of relationship we have had together for more than half a century."

"As was the case in Chicago, where a newspaper typographical strike has been on since November," the association's statement said, "We have had to decide whether to abide by the law or join the ITU executive officers in disregarding or disobeying it.

"We have told the local union that we are interested only in a firm and lawful contract. Our present agreement expires on March 31. If the New York union follows the ITU pattern in Chicago, our printers may strike us any time after midnight on the last day of this month.

"If they strike we shall continue to publish our newspaper."

The association said that last August the international union, at its Cleveland convention, "declared war against the Taft-Hartley law with notice to newspaper publishers thtat our composing rooms—where the type is set—would be the batleground." A month and a half later, the statement said, the local notified the association of its "unqualified indorsement" of the parent body's stand.

Print Shop Damaged By Dynamite Bomb

Chicago, March 10 (U.P.).—A printing shop was damaged by a dynamite bomb early today, and police investigated to see if the bombing was connected with a printer's strike against five Chicago daily newspapers.

The explosion broke about 75 windows in the shop and surrounding property.

"Beyond Our Awn," the commission's first film production, which has been hailed as a hit by theatrical, religious and other publications, will be shown at both meetings.

Snyder Insists Revenue Bureau Is 'Efficient and Well Run'

By the United Press

Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder yesterday sprang to the defense of his tax collectors.

Disagreeing vehemently with the House Appropriations Committee, he said the Internal Revenue Bureau is "well run" and efficient.

The House committee raked the Treasury's tax-collecting branch over the coals yesterday in a report studded with charges of "glaring inefficiency, loafing on the job and wasted efforts."

It blamed "divided authority" for much of the alleged boondoggling and said the various collectors of Internal Revenue should be picked through civil service, rather than appointed.

Sums Collected Cited

Snyder retorted, at a press conference, that "Congress itself established" the system under which collectors are "political appointees" with a considerable degree of independence from central control.

As for the charges of inefficiency, Snyder said:

"I can assure you that the Internal Revenue Bureau is well run and compares more than favorably with any business organization of comparable size."

He added that when 50,000 men can collect 40 billion dollars in taxes, "somebody is doing some work."

Snyder appeared particularly incensed at the report that House investigators had found piles of empty liquor bottles in the bureau's basement, "two separate instances" of employes sleeping on the job, and widespread use of the snack-bar for coffee-drinking during working hours.

He commented acidly that if a large staff of investigators were turned loose on any corporation, and spent the summer and fall looking for things to complain about, they would find a few infractions of the rules in the corporation, too.

He referred to the committee's statement that its investigators had been checking up on the bureau since last summer.

Snyder singled out Internal Revenue Commissioner George J. Schoeneman for individual praise, saying he is doing "a conscientious job and is getting excellent results."

He said another congressional group—the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue—is scheduled to make its own report on the bureau soon, and that he is "anxiously awaiting it."

Finns Ready For Moscow Treaty Trip

Helsinki, March 10 (NYHT).—Finland's President Juho Paasikivi notified Soviet Premier Josef Stalin today that a Finnish delegation was ready to go to Moscow to start negotiations for a friendship and defense pact with Russia.

The President's letter to Stalin was delivered this morning to Lieut. Gen. G. M. Saverenkov, Soviet Ambassador to Finland.

The President met with the seven-man pact delegation this afternoon to decide which military and legal experts should go along. It is probable that Gen. Arno Sihvo, chief of Finnish armed forces, will participate.

[The Associated Press said it was reported before the meeting that several members of the Finnish delegation asked in vain to be relieved of the assignment. Informants said Paasikivi replied: "There is no question of whether you have any desire to do this or that. This is a compulsory labor."]

The makeup of the delegation, which includes four left-wingers, was criticized today by both the Conservative and Socialist press as not reflecting public opinion.

4 Korean Policemen Die in New Outbreaks

Seoul, March 10 (AP).—The United States Army today reported four Korean policemen were killed, three injured and two missing in a renewal of outbreaks in South Korea.

The Army said the incidents were part of the series that began February 7 and cost 80-odd Korean lives and sabotaged communications. American authorities blamed Communist-inspired groups attempting to force the United Nations Election Commission to quit Korea.

Coal Gas Sends Girl, 7, to Hospital

A 7-year-old girl home from school because of illness was partially overcome yesterday by coal gas from a defective flue.

The child, Barbara Jean Oliver, 101 42d st. ne., was admitted to Children's Hospital in "good" condition after preliminary inhalation treatment by a fire rescue squad. Her mother, Mrs. Sylvia Oliver, summoned police after she herself became groggy.

Citrus, Vegetable Crops Near Record

A near-record crop of citrus fruits, and a much larger crop of winter vegetables, was promised the country by the Crop Reporting Board yesterday.

The March report estimated orange production at 112 million boxes. Last year it was 113 million. The average for 1936-45 was 83 million. Florida tangerines are estimated at 3.9 million against 4.7 last year. Grapefruit estimates were set at 61 million boxes; last year the crop was 59 million.

"The aggregate production of commercial truck crops for winter harvest is now indicated at 8 per cent greater than last winter and 22 per cent above the 10-year average," the board added. Increases were predicted in snap beans, cabbage, green peppers, spinach, etc.

The report indicated a great increase in the number of acres in strawberries in Virginia and Maryland this year. Maryland will have three million acres—a gain of 300,000; Virginia will have 4,300,000 against 4,100,000 last year.

The report added that "winter wheat apparently has survived a relatively short but severe winter in as good as or better condition than late planting and unfavorable fall conditions had led growers to expect."

In another report, the Bureau of Agricultural Economics stated that middlemen are now averaging 15½ cents a pound on all meats sold, the largest amount on record. Last year, BAE said, out of an average price of 53.8 cents a pound for meat, the farmer got 38.3—the middleman 15.5. The previous high was 15 cents in 1929.

Grain futures were strong yesterday, owing to Government offers to buy more flour for export. The range of the advance for ¾ of a cent to 4 cents a bushel.

However, lower prices for livestock may soon be reflected in lower prices for shoes, Henry M. McAdoo, president of the United States Leather Co., predicted a drop of $1 a pair because of cheaper hides.

Motion to Kill All Rent Control Rejected in House

By The Associated Press

The House Banking Committee yesterday rejected a motion to kill all rent control at the end of this month.

Chairman Wolcott (R., Mich.) then predicted the committee will approve tomorrow legislation extending the rent law for at least a year. Other committee sources indicated the group will accept the Senate measure to continue controls to May 1, 1949.

The vote on the motion to kill the controls March 31 was taken behind closed doors and only the result was announced.

Wolcott said some bill will be approved by Congress and sent to the White House before the one-month stopgap extension expires at the end of this month.

However, Wolcott told reporters the measure probably will modify present controls.

The "big fight," he said, probably will come on efforts to put more authority in local rent boards.

Aid Bill Ship Plan Deleted

give a 74-3 defeat to the Henry Wallace scheme to scrap the Marshall Plan and put all European relief and reconstruction into the hands of the United Nations.

The plan had been proposed by Senator Glen Taylor (D., Idaho), Wallace's prospective candidate for Vice President, at the end of a two-day speech calling for "understanding" with Russia.

When Taylor had finished, Vandenberg proposed the rarely used device of suspending the rules to permit an immediate roll call. The Senate seemed eager to show what it thought of Wallace and, incidentally, to provide a show of unity that might impress foreign nations.

The only three who voted for Taylor's United Nations substitute for the Marshall Plan were Taylor himself, Senator Langer (R., N. Dak.), who had voted against ratifying the U. N. Charter, and Senator Pepper (D., Fla.). Pepper has been for and against ERP, approving its purposes but wanting it handled by the United Nations.

Apart from Taylor's, only two set speeches were made yesterday. One, from Senator O'Daniel (D., Tex.) was a litter attack on the whole ERP program. The other, from Senator Chavez (D., N. Mex.) called for the development of oil resources in Mexico, and protested angrily against sending half a million tons of American steel to Saudi Arabia for the use of American oil companies in drilling new wells there.

"The fact is," said Chavez, "that the business of developing oil resources in our neighbor country, Mexico, is now stultified because of the pressure for development thousands of miles from our own shores."

The Republican whip, Senator Wherry of Nebraska, scheduled a night session tonight, with another night meeting tomorrow and an all-day session Saturday if necessary, in the effort to get a final vote by this weekend.

Meanwhile, House leaders were in worse confusion than ever over a time-table which would insure action on ERP well before the Italian elections on April 18.

The trouble is the persistent desire of House Republicans, opposed by Vandenberg on the Senate side, to combine military and economic help to China and military help to Greece and Turkey with the ERP bill.

Chairman Eaton (R., N. J.) of the House Foreign Affairs Committee opposes the single-package bill, but postponed a meeting of his committee scheduled for this morning to start writing some kind of ERP measure. Instead, there will be another meeting of House Republican leaders, perhaps with Vandenberg present, to seek agreement on a time-table.

A majority of Eaton's committee is still believed to favor the combined bill, although Eaton himself said on Tuesday that it might "reconsider" an earlier decision to combine all the foreign aid programs.

Emergency Funds For President Cut to $200,000

By The Associated Press

A Senate Appropriations Subcommittee yesterday voted to cut President Truman's emergency funds from the $700,000 allowed by the House to $200,000.

Senator Reed (R., Kans.), chairman of the 11-member group, at first told reporters:

"We cut the President's emergency funds out completely."

Later he said about $200,000 was retained to finance employment of presidential assistants.

The funds are for the 12 months beginning July 1.

Meyers Counsel Expected To Rest Defense Today

despite 12 days of testimony, would collapse, since without an oath there could be no perjury.

Mettee testified that General Meyers made his $2000 offer to him last October 26, after the Senate subcommittee had started holding closed hearings on its investigation of the Air Force procurement officer.

Says Meyers Called Him

The former Army sergeant, now a student at Ohio State University in Columbus under the GI Bill of Rights, said Meyers sent for him to come to Huntington, Long Island, where Meyers was living on October 25.

Meeting him at the train, Mettee said, the general directed him to register under a false name, "Mike Travers" of Baltimore, Md., at the Huntington Hotel so that investigators would not learn of the conference.

Meyers told him, Mettee testified, that he was involved in an investigation "of a political nature and I could help him."

"He told me there had been pressure on him to expose Mr. Roosevelt, which he would not do," the witness said.

"And as a result of the investigation, he told me, Mr. Lamarre was trying to blackmail him," Mettee said.

The witness said that Meyers told him Lamarre was demanding $25,000 in blackmail. Lamarre was wartime president of the Aviation Electric Corp., founded by Meyers, and is now a key Government witness against Meyers.

Former sergeant testifies

The day after he arrived in Huntington, Mettee testified, he went for a four-hour ride alone with Meyers and there discussed the story he was to tell Justice Department investigators.

The lies Mettee said he was asked to tell were designed to show that it was Lamarre, not Meyers, who owned a blue Fleetwing Cadillac paid for by Aviation Electric Corp.

Haltingly the witness painted a picture of Meyers in the car taking the role of an investigator and putting on a question-and-answer rehearsal with his former chauffeur until the latter had learned his lines.

"Then the general said that if I was able to be of value to him through my testimony that when it was all over he would give me $2000, Mettee told the jury.

"I didn't really agree to take it," he continued. "I said I wouldn't want to be in the same position as Lamarre and we left it at that."

Then Meyers told him he would send his own representative to Columbus to talk to Mettee and Mettee was to tell the false version of the story, he testified.

Mettee said he told the false story to Leo Riley, a private detective employed by Meyers, and also to an FBI investigator.

But when he reached Washington, he said, he informed District Attorney Edward Molenof he had told the FBI "a lot of baloney."

Defense counsel repeatedly questioned Mettee about where he was staying in Washington, underlining the point that all three friends with whom he stayed are employed by the United States Navy.

The friends are: Lt. Leo Chattler, 2716 31st se.; Harry L. Kidwell, 6260 Allentown Road, Camp Springs; and Frederick Davison, 3004 Gainsville rd, se.

Mettee testified the general had paid him $20 a month extra during the war to run errands, wash windows, etc., for Mrs. Meyers, but wanted him to swear it was Lamarre who paid him. The $20, Mettee said, just about covered expenses of clean uniforms and carfare home after extra duties.

The Nation's Commercial Printers Get

"the treatment"

Commercial printing is one of the nation's largest manufacturing industries. It employs close to 300,000 persons and its wage scales and annual earnings per employee are among the highest in any industry.

One of the major crafts in the printing industry is typesetting and approximately 25,000 commercial printing employees are members of the International Typographical Union.

A collective bargaining relationship has existed between some printing firms and this union for the past 90 years. In New York there have been city-wide contracts for more than 40 years; in Philadelphia 15 years; in Chicago over 30 years.

On August 22, 1947, as a means of combatting the Taft-Hartley Law, the International Typographical Union adopted a policy of "no collective bargaining." Instead, the ITU demanded the right to establish "conditions of employment" of its own choosing.

On December 31, 1947, contracts between printing employers and ITU locals in several major cities, representing the bulk of the printing produced in the United States, expired. The ITU then began a series of job actions and strikes. These include the refusal to work overtime, slowdowns, sitdowns and other kinds of pressure. All of these were done in an effort to get the commercial printing industry to accept the ITU's demands without a contract and without collective bargaining. The ITU leadership calls this program of pressure "THE TREATMENT."

In Chicago, where the newspaper compositors are on strike, the commercial plants have received "THE TREATMENT" ending in the tie-up of the composing rooms of the city's largest manufacturing industry. The Philadelphia union shop commercial printing composing rooms are completely shut down by a general strike. It seems inevitable that the ITU, irrespective of the wishes of the local members and ladership, will shortly begin to give New York "THE TREATMENT."

On Wednesday, February 25, Woodruff Randolph, president of the ITU, at a meeting of employers in Chicago, said, "Even under the law (Taft-Hartley Law) we can give you more assorted chaos than you have ever experienced."

On Monday, March 1, Elmer Brown, second vice president of the ITU, told New York employers at an industry meeting that he "regrets" that the industry will have to "suffer the consequences" if it does not agree completely to the ITU policy.

Seven other unions have contractual relations with union employers in the printing industry. Relations with these other unions have not been affected and employers have in every case provided them with the maximum security permitted under the Taft-Hartley Law.

In every case, union employers have informed the local leadership of the ITU that if the union can enter into a legal contract they are prepared to work out a new contract at once. But the ITU has not permitted its locals to bargain.

In order to get some relief from unfair labor practices, charges have been filed before the National Labor Relations Board, but, unfortunately, the processes of the Board are slow; there has as yet been no definite decision and "THE TREATMENT" goes on.

If "THE TREATMENT" continues it will not be long before all industry in the nation will be affected. Together New York, Chicago and Philadelphia produce more than half of all the nation's commercial printing, including magazines, books, advertising and functional and utility printing without which no business can operate. Of course, the pressrooms and other parts of the plants will continue to work and some effort will be made to employ substitute typesetting processes, but the whole battle is an atrocious economic waste; the irresponsible and needless disruption of an industry and of the nation's economy.

We place this advertisement so that the public will know that we are not anti-union. We did not pick this fight with the ITU. Our members remain ready and willing to negotiate new contracts whenever the ITU is prepared to resume our long standing collective bargaining relationship. But until the ITU is willing to negotiate legal contracts in good faith, our members and member associations will resist "THE TREATMENT."

Burned Dock Hands Sue U. S. for $3,250,000

Mobile, Ala., March 10 (AP).—Sixty-five longshoremen filed suit in Federal Court here today asking $3,250,000 damages from the Government for burns they alleged were suffered in unloading German poison gas bombs.

They claimed they were permanently injured while handling the bombs aboard the S. S. Francis L. Lee from June 8, 1946, to July 23, 1946, at the nearby Theodore naval ammunition depot.

A Weak, Run-Down Feeling Is Often A Warning

That The Red-Blood Is Getting Low

If you do not feel like your real self, do not have the urge to be up and doing, why not check-up on your blood strength? Look at the palms of your hands, your fingernails, your lips, the lobes of your ears—are they pale and off color?

Every day—every hour—millions of tiny red-blood-cells must pour forth from the marrow of your bones to replace those that are worn-out. A low blood count may affect you in several ways: no appetite, underweight, no energy, a run-down condition, lack of resistance to infection and disease.

To get real relief you must keep up your blood strength. Medical authorities, by analysis of the blood, have by positive proof shown that S.S.S. Tonic is amazingly effective in building up low blood strength in non-organic nutritional anemia. This is due to the S.S.S. Tonic formula which contains special and potent activating ingredients.

Also, S.S.S. Tonic helps you enjoy the food you eat by increasing the gastric digestive juice when it is non-organically too little or scanty—thus the stomach will have little cause to get balky with gas, bloat and give off that sour food taste.

Don't wait! Energize your body with rich, red-blood. Start on S.S.S. Tonic now. As vigorous blood surges throughout your whole body, greater freshness and strength should make you eat better, sleep better, feel better, work better, play better, have a healthy color glow in your skin—firm flesh fill out hollow places. Millions of bottles sold. Get a bottle from your drug store. S.S.S. Tonic helps Build Sturdy Health.

One on the Aisle—

Sleeping Pills Are Dull Fodder

By Richard L. Coe

IF YOU'VE BEEN living at the bottom of a well for the last five or six years, the Palace's "Sleep, My Love" probably will strike you as a pretty juicy thriller.

This picture is a good example of Hollywood's passion for trend-following. Some skilled people have constructed a film with general competence; the fact remains, there have been too many like it for its own good.

Here we have the case of the man who wants to murder his wife by driving her nuts. Conjugal mayhem as entertainment got its most recent spurt from Patrick Hamilton's "Angel Street," which reverted to its original title, "Gaslight," for the movies. "Double Indemnity," "The Postman Always Ring Twice," "The Secret Beyond the Door" and some 10 lesser efforts recently hinged on the same idea.

With the exception of Don Ameche, who is up to his usual rut, "Sleep, My Love" is businesslike and sometimes quite chilling about its bloody proposition. Claudette Colbert is most effective as the wealthy wife whose husband has his eye on her checking account and funeral rites. Robert Cummings is his smooth self as the visitor who suspects fould deeds are at play. George Coulouris is frightening behind thick-rimmed glasses and Hazel Brooks is fiendishly eye-catching as the sulky beauty who would supplant Miss Colbert in her Sutton Place home.

"SLEEP, MY LOVE." United Artists release of a Triangle Production (Mary Pickford), produced by Charles Rogers and Ralph Cohn, with Harold Greene. Screen play by St. Clair McKelway and Leo Rosten, from a novel by Rosten. Directed by Douglas Sirk. Photographed by Joseph Valentine. At the Palace.

THE CAST

Alison Courtland	Claudette Colbert
Bruce Elliott	Robert Cummings
Richard Courtland	Don Ameche
Daphne	Hazel Brooks
Barby	Rita Johnson
Charles Vernay	George Coulouris
Dr. Rhinehart	Ralph Morgan
Mrs. Vernay	Quenele Smith
Jimmie	Keye Luke
Jeannie	Maria San Marco

Lieut. Straka	Raymond Burr

Sleeping Drugs Angle

There has been an attempt to give the plot a new twist by introducing drugs as the means whereby the husband achieves hypnosis in his wife. However, the pictorial difference between drugs and mere poison is perceptible only to expert pharmacists, though the effect on Ameche is a merciful one; he is at last permitted sleep, on the verge of which he has been tottering for years.

Specifically, the drugs concerned are barbiturates that induce sleep. I can't see how picturing their effects in the films will do any harm; showing them as products that should be controlled may even do some good. But their use in this picture, though fundamental to the plot, is by no means sensational.

The production is Mary Pickford's first in a long time and parts of it, particularly the early reels, are labored and, even, old-fashioned. The experienced Hollywood observers, Leo Rosten and St. Clair McKelway, might well have cut their lengthy script considerably, for they weaken their pace by introducing some characters and events that are extraneous.

Miss Colbert, as usual, is fine as the perplexed wife and makes you almost forget the unlikelihood of an old New Yorker having so few friends. Everyone she knows seems to come from Boston, which is no longer funny in the movies.

Still, there's nothing too wrong with "Sleep, My Love," except that by now there's not much movie suspense in uxorcide.

DICK CONTINO, the 18-year-old who's been walking off with all those prize awards on the Horace Heidt show, got into town a day ahead of the Heidt band, which begins its week at the Capitol this morning . . . But from now on, for the next 42 weeks he won't be getting the drop on the Musical Knights . . . Beginning today, Dick joins the Heidt unit as a featured entertainer in his own right . . . As of yesterday, he dropped out of the amateur accordion class and now boasts his own union card . . . His first professional shots were in unlikely places, the Press Club and a certain newspaper office . . . He's a big youngster, looks a lot older than a teen-ager, 22, say, and has the air of enjoying himself when he plays . . . When the contest began he was a Fresno, Calif., lad who played at local weddings and parties, never dreaming he'd be hitting the solid income bracket.

SIGMUND ROMBERG will be paying a visit to Washington tomorrow . . . He's to give a benefit concert at Constitution Hall in May under the sponsorship of the Variety Club . . . Tomorrow afternoon the club will fete him with a cocktail party in its Willard Hotel quarters . . . As an operetta expert he might run down the street and look in on "The Chocolate Soldier."

BARBARA GREENE, daughter of Mrs. Radford Brown, 3514 Williamsburg lane nw., should be getting some telegrams from Washington today . . . This Smith College lass will be playing one of the leads in the school's production of "Ladies in Retirement," opening a three-night run tonight at Northampton.

CAREFUL, CLAUDETTE, CAREFUL! That's Don Ameche's hand giving Claudette Colbert a bedtime drink in "Sleep, My Love" and if Claudette obeys her evident impulse, all will be well at the Palace

Health Department Control Of Gallinger Hit by Mason

culosis service at Gallinger, whom he had accused of assisting Dr. Blades in "sneaking" in an ineligible patient, and Dr. Effler, who until Friday was chief of surgical services at Gallinger. Effler previously accepted responsibility for admitting the patient.

Then, in an unexpected swipe at the Health Department, Commissioner Mason criticized its control of Gallinger and revealed that he was conducting an investigation of his own to determine whether administration shouldn't be handled through some other unit.

Dr. Blades had suggested in a blast about 10 days ago that control of the municipally-operated institution be shifted to a department of hospitals under the District Commissioners. Other critics urged that a bureau be set up within the Health Department to run the hospital.

"I have come to the conclusion," Mason asserted, "that trying to operate a hospital in a department that is primarily geared to operate in a field of preventive medicine is wrong. The hospital ultimately becomes a stepchild."

Dr. Marvin, in a letter prepared in rebuttal to Mason's charges against Dr. Blades, said he could find no support for any contention that Dr. Blades should be removed."

Mason had accused Dr. Blades of securing the admission of Mrs. Grace Allocca of Baltimore, a tuberculosis victim, in violation of local regulations. Indigent persons who do not reside in the District cannot stay at Gallinger unless their illness is of an emergency nature.

Dr. Marvin's report to the Commissioner brought out that Mrs. Allocca's case was considered an emergency by both Dr. Blades and Dr. Effler.

Gallinger doctors had planned to operate on her left lung, Marvin's report said. But in the time it took to transfer the woman from the local institution to a Maryland hospital her right lung "had become infected" and plans for surgery had to be called off.

Teamster Local Sued For $500,000 by Stores

Pittsburgh, March 10 (AP).—The May Department Stores Co. of New York today filed suit in Federal District Court for $500,000 against Local 249, AFL-Teamsters Union. The suit was filed under the Taft-Hartley Act.

The company owns and operates the Kaufman Department Store in Pittsburgh's Golden Triangale, where truck drivers refused to make deliveries when the company on March 1 assigned a traffic engineer to ride a suburban route.

National Dairy Sales at Peak But Net Eases

By S. Oliver Goodman

National Dairy Products Co., which operates extensively in the Washington area, yesterday reported net income of $23,159,391 for 1947 on record sales of $897,323,456.

Van Bomel

This compared with 1946 net of $25,443,817 on sales of $724,408,587. Earnings last year were equal to $3.68 a common share, against $4.05 a share in previous year.

National Dairy is the parent firm of Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase Dairy Co. and Southern Dairies, Inc., of Washington.

In the annual statement to stockholders President L. A. Van Bomel declared: "The lower earnings realized in 1947 were due to greatly increased costs and our resistance to consumer price increases. We held the price line as long as it was possible to do so. The cost of procuring, processing, packaging and delivering our products advanced $157,615,000, however, while sales increased only $154,915,000. This made it necessary to increase prices."

Van Bomel deplored the price increases and added: "The forces which increase costs, and consequently drive prices up . . . are beyond the control of any individual company. They present a most serious problem, not only to our business, but all businesses, all groups and all classes of people."

NET INCREASES: Allied Chemical & Dye Corp. reported consolidated net income of $30,311,484, equal to $13.69 a share, in 1947. In 1946 earnings were $26,706,691, or $12.06 a share. Sales were at a record high of $365,944,000, against $280,945,000 in 1946. Demand for acids, alkalis, dyestuffs, tar derivatives, roofings, coke and nitrogen products "again exceeded the company's ability to supply," the report said.

NEW MARGIN RULE: Washington brokerage circles are hopeful that the Federal Reserve Board's revision of margin rules, effective April 1, will increase stock turnover. Allowable will be substitutions in an undermargined securities account without the requirement that additional margin be put up. The substitutions in such an account, that is one having a margin of less than 75 per cent, may be made by sale of one security and purchase of another, according to the board. In the past, such substitutions were limited by the rule that the proceeds of sales of securities in an undermargined account be used to the extent necessary to increase the margin on the remaining securities until it was on the 75 per cent basis.

OFF BEATEN PATH: The 1947 annual report of the Bank of Warwick in Hilton Village, Va., should win a prize for originality. The cover shows only a white rabbit admiring a giant red beet and financial items inside are garnished with tomatoes, watermelons, beans and peppers. Stripes of a zebra provide a bar chart which measures the bank's yearly growth and the employes turn up dressed as gardeners. Photographs show the bookkeepers "digging in" their records with shovels, the tellers raking in the money with other tools. Cashier B. F. Rhodes, spark-plug of this thriving institution, pushes a hand cultivator. Rhodes, who is 32, flabbergasts the old school sometimes. When his bank passed the million mark in resources, Rhodes' ad chortled: "Oh boy! We've put on our first long pants!"

Capital Transit Promotes Five To High Posts

Five promotions were announced by Capital Transit Co. following approval by the board of directors at the annual meeting yesterday.

Emmons

All officers and directors were relected.

Heading the new appointments was the advancement of Samuel E. Emmons, formerly operating manager, to general manager. The latter position had been vacant since July 24, 1947, when Edward D. Merrill relinquished the post to become chairman of the board as well as president. Emmons, who was manager of a Rio de Janeiro transit firm before joining Capital Transit in 1941, lives at 17 Magnolia pkwy., Chevy Chase, Md.

Other new appointments: John B. Ecker, formerly director of research and planning, to assistant to the general manager; John B. Fleming, formerly purchasing agent, to director of purchases and stores; K. M. Pardoe, formerly assistant purchasing agent, to purchasing agent, and I. B. Goad, formerly superintendent of schedules, to director of schedules and traffic.

Fleming entered the employ of the Washington & Georgetown Railroad Co. 54 years ago as an apprentice shop mechanic. He had been purchasing agent since 1915. He lives at 1824 Kilbourne pl. nw.

Pardoe joined the Capital Traction Co. in 1913 and has been assistant purchasing agent since 1919. He lives at 1207 North Dinwiddie st., Arlington, Va.

Goad became associated with Capital Traction in 1920 and was advanced to superintendent of schedules in 1938. He lives at 200 Rhode Island ave. ne.

Western Union Votes $1 Dividend on Class A

New York, March 10 (AP).—Western Union Telegraph Co. today declared a $1 dividend on its class "A" stock, payable April 1 to stockholders of record March 19.

The last payment was 50 cents on December 15, 1945. A similar amount was disbursed in the three other quarters that year making a total of $2 for 1945.

Joseph L. Egan, president of Western Union, said 1947 earnings prompted the dividend but that it did not imply future dividend policy. The class "A" is the only outstanding stock. Class "B" was ordered converted into the class "A" on June 10, 1947.

New York Cotton

New York, March 10 (AP).—Cotton futures closed unchanged to 50 cents a bale lower today.

The market established early gains of 75 cents a bale on mill buying, but later reacted to losses of more than $1.00 a bale. Liquidation was encouraged by Washington reports indicating that there would be a further delay in signing of the credit agreement to finance sales of cotton to Japan. Later Washington reports that the Army had applied to Export-Import Bank for participation in the deal stimulated a flurry of covering. Prices moved up more than $1.00 a bale on the news, but failed to reach the best levels for the day.

Celanese Reports on 1947

Sales

Sales were the largest in the Company's history. They amounted to $181,083,608, representing an increase of $45,881,397, or approximately 34% over 1946.

The increase in sales volume came principally from new plant facilities and improvements in existing plant facilities, as well as improved operating efficiencies. Sales results were achieved through substantially increased sales in the chemical and textile divisions.

Income and Dividends

Net income after taxes amounted to $24,173,417, an increase of $8,114,001 over 1946. Provision for Federal Taxes on Income amounted to $15,887,000 compared with $11,577,000 for 1946.

Earnings per share of Common Stock amounted to $3.83 compared with $2.36 for 1946, after providing for the Preferred Stock dividends.

Cash dividends of $3,032,347 and $7,165,717 were declared on the Preferred Stocks and Common Stock respectively, making a total of $10,198,064 for 1947 compared with a total of $7,988,685 for 1946.

Prices

The Company succeeded, despite substantially increased costs of raw materials and generally higher wage rates, in holding the prices of its products at levels that represent sound and sustained value in terms of consumer purchasing power.

Average wage rates for industry have increased markedly, resulting in greater consumer purchasing power. In terms of real wages, this has meant a steady and appreciable reduction in the relative cost of Celanese* yarns to the consumer.

The Company's price record has been accomplished through such factors as technological improvements in manufacturing processes, chemical research to produce new and improved products, and more efficient production achieved through expanded volume.

Plant Additions

The Company carried forward its program of expansion and modernization of plant facilities. Expenditures for 1947 amounted to $36,470,175, compared with $20,310,661 in 1946. Some of these expenditures contributed to the increased sales volume during the year, and others will raise production levels in 1948.

Upon completion of the current program, the Company's plants will have the most modern and efficient equipment and processes that our technical knowledge and research can now develop.

Research

The Company continued its long-range research program in the two fields in which it has pioneered, that of cellulosic chemistry for the development of its yarn and plastic products, and that of petroleum chemistry for the development of basic organic chemicals derived from petroleum gases.

Expenditures for research amounted to $2,825,119. In 1946, $2,284,571 was spent. The cumulative expenditure for research since 1925 amounts to more than $17,400,000.

September of last year saw the opening of the central research laboratory at Summit, New Jersey, considered to be among the finest industrial laboratories in the country. New facilities were installed for the Company's petroleum chemicals research and development center at Clarkwood, near Corpus Christi, Texas, where advanced research in petroleum chemistry is carried on.

Employees

The expanding production operations of the Company required increased personnel. There were 22,820 men and women in the employ of the Company and its subsidiaries as of December 31, 1947.

Total wages and salaries paid to Celanese employees amounted to $62,520,107 in 1947.

In addition to direct payments for wages and salaries, the Company spent more than three and one-half millions of dollars for employee benefits. This added compensation covered Company payments for Federal Old Age Benefits, Federal and State Unemployment Insurance, the Company's share of the Employees Retirement Income Plan, and the costs to the Company of the Group Insurance Plan.

Raw Material Supplies

The Company advanced its long range program for assuring the supply of basic materials essential to its manufacturing processes. One of the principal accomplishments within this program is the production at its plant at Bishop, Texas, of essential chemicals for use in the manufacture of cellulose acetate.

The Company also carried forward its plans to produce a substantial part of its increased requirements of cellulose. Arrangements were made with the Government of British Columbia for a Forest Management License for cutting rights to large tracts of forest which will provide the timber requirements for a cellulose plant to be erected near Prince Rupert, B.C. Progress was made in the preparation of the site for the plant, and in engineering work preliminary to actual plant construction.

Sales Outlook

The Company looks forward to a substantially increased sales volume in 1948 from its additional plant facilities. The Company's operations involve chiefly chemical processes, and it holds strong positions in the chemical fiber industry, the industrial chemical industry, and the cellulosic plastic industry.

The Company is a principal producer of cellulose acetate yarn and staple fiber for textile purposes. It also produces viscose process yarn in substantial volume. By virtue of the processes used in making cellulose acetate, the product in its primary form may be converted either into yarn or plastic materials, affording flexibility of operation.

Annual Report

The Company's operations in 1947 are reviewed in the Annual Report to its stockholders. A copy will be sent without charge, on request. Please address Celanese Corporation of America, Dept. 113, 180 Madison Avenue, New York 16, New York.

WASHINGTON: THURSDAY, MARCH 11, 1948

Dr. McIntire Says:

Blood Bank Will Raise Health Level

A prediction that the new Red Cross blood program will play a strong role in raising the health level of this country came yesterday from Dr. Ross T. McIntire, wartime Surgeon General of the Navy and director of the Red Cross blood program.

Dr. McIntire spoke at the annual Red Cross luncheon sponsored by the Fashion Group of Washington in the East Room at the Mayflower Hotel.

"If the blood recruitment program reaches and maintains a high level, there can be no question that the mortality rate for the Nation will be lowered," he said.

The peacetime blood program, which developed as a result of successful wartime service to battle victims by the Red Cross, will now give aid to all citizens, according to Dr. McIntire. Among those who will benefit are obstetrical cases, infants, children of slum areas and accident cases.

Spring and summer fashions, created by a group of local designers were shown at the luncheon.

The fashion parade, which followed Dr McIntire's talk, presented the handiwork of 10 talented Washingtonians. Four hat designers were represented by frothy, flower-bedecked bonnets. Included were Mme. Camille Chautemps, Philip Robertson, Edith Burrows and Moselle. A collection of interesting scarfs were shown by Charles Latshaw, and Mary Davis displayed cunning cottons for the young fry.

Lovely custom-made costumes, including dresses, coats and suits, were shown by Magda, Betty Beane, Yvette and Louise Armour.

Red Cross Members Attend

Miss Gertrude Prisley, regional director of the Fashion Group, presided at the luncheon. Seated with her at the head table were Dr. and Mrs. McIntire, Edward F. Bartelt, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, Mrs. Bartelt and Miss Petty Bartelt; Mrs. Nita Russell, director of

See GROUP, Page 2, Column 7.

ADELE SIMPSON has a decided flair for petticoats. She uses them in a variety of gay and amusing ways to lend interest and charm to her new summer collection of cottons. Here she creates a new kind of day-to-evening or beach-to-patio "convertible" by adding or subtracting a flounced petticoat. Above, the evening version in blush pink chambray with drawstring bra top, princess waistline and bell skirt. Whirling prettily around the ankles are flounces of white point d'esprit

MINUS the filmy, flirtatious petticoat, the frock becomes ballerina length, suitable for informal dinners or beach wear. This dress is one of a series of similar cottons which Miss Simpson previewed to the press in New York.

THE latest Simpson collection features new, cool fabrics and colors. Included are cloisonne silks with a delicate satin tracery of Chinese motifs against a rough pure silk texture; opalescent chambrays that glint with two deep colors; sleek linens treated for crease resistance, and satin-striped chambrays

Friends See Last Speech As Masaryk's Veiled Words Of His Own Intentions

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Jan Masaryk, Czechoslovakia's Foreign Minister, who committed suicide Tuesday in Prague, had many devoted friends in New York. The son of Thomas G. Masaryk, founder and first President of Czechoslovakia, Jan spent much of his life here, was more American than European. Tall, chunky, baldish, a black patch covering an eye, he was a great social favorite, made almost any party fun. Cooking was his pet hobby and he specialized in concocting such indigestibles as richly stuffed goose.

Those who knew him intimately were not shocked at Jan's supposed acquiescence to the newly installed Communist-controlled government. They read between the lines of his speech accepting the Red Fascist regime a farewell message. A final phrase indicated his intention "I am with you to the end, my brothers."

Not so long ago Masaryk addressed the New York Herald Tribune Forum. His speech, friendly in tone to Russia, emphasized that Czechs and Soviets could and would cooperate successfully. Afterwards Elsa Maxwell, who was a great friend of Jan's, asked if he was sure of being right. Masaryk's answer, overheard by many and afterwards much quoted, was a single sad sentence "Elsa, you can only be sure of one thing—death."

Devoted to Writer

A LONG time ago Jan was married and divorced from statuesque Frances Crane, member of a wealthy Massachusetts family. In recent years he was devoted to talented Marcia Davenport, daughter of the late opera star, Alma Gluck, and authoress of such best sellers as Lena Geyer, Life of Mozart, Valley of Decision. Marcia was in Prague and escaped shortly after the coup.

Scientific Expedition

WITH the world in turmoil, it's nice to hear of a young, handsome and wealthy entry starting out on a leisurely scientific expedition. Philadelphia's Cummins Catherwoods have chartered Drayton Cochran's 100-foot schooner, hired him as skipper, and set off for the Caribbean.

Seventeen ornithologists, conchologists and other ologists are going along too, to bring back specimens for Philadelphia's Academy of Science. Their first stop will be at Cay Largo, an island far off Cuba's coast, then they'll move on to New Providence and other sand driblets off Honduras.

The whole expedition got under way from New York a couple of days ago to the accompaniment of much bulb-flashing by the local press and by such camera experts as Jerome Zerbe, who is clocking these days for Town and Country. Most of the scientists turned up in store clothes, the ladies muffled in mink, and Zerbe made himself unpopular by forcing them to change into tropical working outfits. Cummins and Ellen Catherwood were duly photographed, then sensibly left by train for Palm Beach where they'll join their expedition.

Miss Fleming Sets Bridal Date

Miss Jocelyn Fleming, daughter of Maj. Gen. Philip Fleming, Federal Works Administrator, and Mrs. Fleming, has selected Saturday, March 27, as the date of her marriage to Franklin Gutchess, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Gutchess of Philadelphia.

The ceremony will take place at 4 p. m. in Christ Church, Georgetown, and a reception will follow at the Sulgrave Club. Miss Fleming's four attendants will be Mrs. Richard Janes of Arlington, Va., formerly of St. Paul, Minn.; Miss Alice Crowder and Miss Frances Latady of Boston and Mrs. Michael Plaut of Keene, N. H.

Carson Fleming, brother of the bride-elect, will be an usher.

Mr. Gutchess and his bride will live in Cambridge, Mass., while he finishes his postgraduate work at Harvard. They plan to make their home in Washington.

Rep. Herter to Talk At Radcliffe Tea

Radcliffe Club of Washington will hear an "off-the-record" talk on the European Recovery Program by Representative Christian A. Herter at the tea Saturday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Francis B. Silsbee, 2620 Quebec st. nw.

Mrs. William A. Coblenz will introduce the speaker. Presiding at the tea table will be Mrs. A. Barr Comstock and Mrs. Henry Gratton Doyle. Reservations may be made with Mrs. Royal C. Bryant, Temple 7836.

Mme. Koo to Give Benefit Tea

Mme. Koo, wife of the Chinese Ambassador, has issued invitations for a tea Tuesday, March 16, at 4 p. m. in honor of the committee sponsoring the fashion show to be held for the benefit of the Institute of Chinese Culture on March 21.

Easter Luncheon

Mrs. Frederick Mitchell Gould will entertain at an Easter Sunday luncheon at the Carlton in honor of Alfred Stirling, Australian Minister, and his sister, Miss Dorothy Stirling.

Holyoke Graduates Plan Decade Parties

A series of "decade parties" has been scheduled for graduates of Mount Holyoke College now residing in nearby Maryland.

Mrs. M. E. Parkinson of 7609 Dellwood pl., Bethesda, Md., will entertain women graduated from the college between 1930 and 1940 at 3 p. m. Sunday, March 14. On Thursday, March 18, Miss Jean E. Benton, 711 Elm st., Chevy Chase, will be hostess to women graduated since 1940.

Embassy Party to Mark Iranian New Year

TO CELEBRATE the ancient Festival of Norouz, or the Iranian New Year's Day, the Minister and Charge d'Affaires of Iran and Mme. Noury-Esfandiary will entertain at a reception Monday, March 22, from 6 to 8 at the embassy.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Two Years Ago, at 22, European Man Orphaned By War Was Jilted by Girl Who Meant Much to Him, and He Has Been Severely Depressed Since

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Ever since my arrival from Europe eight months ago I have been reading your articles with sincere appreciation of your wise understanding counsel.

Now as a last resort I am turning to you for help, after many consultations with different doctors and one eminent psychiatrist, none of whom told me the essential cause of my trouble, and whose services were of no avail.

The facts are that I have suffered a severe depression, head pains, jerking of the eyes, failing memory and loss of confidence in myself since two years ago, when I broke off a nine months' friendship with a girl. Or rather, after she broke off, saying that she felt too young to go steady with a young man. We were both 22 years old then.

Life Has Palled, He Avoids People

I STARTED to avoid people and to withdraw from life, losing all desire to live, although I fought against this. Prior to this affair I was of a cheerful disposition, had lots of friends, was always happy and managed to enjoy life fully, despite the fact that I was a war orphan.

Do you think the low state of mind in which I am now was caused by this affair with the girl? If so, why? And how can I get to feel myself again?

I would like to say that the girl meant a great deal to me and made up for many things I missed. But I should have thought that clear reasoning on my part and the passage of time since then would have helped me overcome it and get to the bottom of the emotional conflict which I am sure is back of it all.

Having studied a little social psychology myself, I have been trying to analyze myself, but the more I think about the problem the more complicated it seems and I find myself going in circles. Will you please help me? F. B.

Overestimates The Experience

DEAR F. B.: Your low state of mind was caused by the girl's decision to terminate the affair only in the sense that it came as a crowning blow, when you were already precariously disturbed emotionally (to a much greater extent than you realized) by a series of devastating shocks and heartaches that had gone before, leaving you a war orphan at a young age, in the wake of the European holocaust.

You say the girl meant a great deal to you, that she made up for many things you missed, which signifies that you were clinging to her dependently—with jealous possessive anxiety, I daresay,—as to a life raft in a sea of troubles. And doing this at a point in your experience when you were soul-beset by that ultimate sense of desolation and frightened loneliness felt by sensitive persons who've lost faith in God, humanity and their own powers to cope with life, as a result of knowing too much catastrophe and too little peace, security, love and protection in formative years.

In all probability, your attachment to the girl embodied much resentment, inasmuch as dependent personalities do greatly resent their dependent state (though unawarely) and translate it into grievances against the love-object.

Girl Couldn't Meet His Need

THUS when she cast you off, this latent resentment was tremendously accelerated by the rejection-experience, which also unleashed a new tidalwave of panicky despair, and you had no way of constructively draining off these critically disturbing negative emotions, the nature of which you couldn't fathom,—so they took toll of your physical and psychological health in the manner described.

In brief, then, it seems to me your basic problem has to do with loneliness and fear of life, which in turn boils down, just as you say, to loss of confidence in yourself, a condition which is quite understandable in view of your tragic background, but which at your age (and with your natural vigor, which has brought you through so much) should be rather quickly remediable, provided you get a bit of first-hand help from a genuinely competent specialist.

Physicians and one eminent psychiatrist having failed to light up the difficulty and break the log-jam of congested distress, it surely follows that a seasoned psycho-analyst with spiritual discernment—and there are a few,—is the counsellor needed here.

About the girl: Your healing will begin when you realize that she had to break off in self-defense, because your unconscious demands of her were in essence irrational. She simply couldn't be the satisfactory Father-Mother-God, the all-in-all, that you implicitly wanted her to be. M. H.

Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Washington Post.

The Long Party

It is a mistake to have the party for the small child of long duration. At this age parties are very exciting and wearing to youngsters and therefore apt to cause upset digestive tracts if continued beyond the "tired" stage. An hour of games and then the refreshments will be found about all the three- or four-year-old can stand with perfect good humor, so keep your parties short.

In Bridal Procession

All Souls Church was the scene of the wedding of Miss Gladys Rowe and Dr. William Andrew Archer March 6 at 11 a. m. The Rev. A. Powell Davies officiated.

Daughter of Mrs. Mary B. Rowe of Burgaw, N. C., the bride was given in marriage by her brother, State Senator Roy Rowe. She wore a tailored suit of oyster white with veiled green sailor hat and corsage of green orchids.

Mrs. James F. Kieley of Chevy Chase was matron of honor, and the best man was Carl O. Erlanson of Hillandale, Md. Serving as ushers were Ellsworth Killip and and Jason Swallen.

Mrs. Archer is a graduate of Proctor Academy in New Hampshire and George Washington University Junior College. She has served in the Foreign Service of the State Department, and is now a secretary on the Joint Congressional Committee on Labor-Management Relations.

Dr. Archer is curator of the herborium for the National Arboretum in Washington. He has done extensive plant research and exploration in Mexico, Central and South America in the past few years, and returned in 1946 from four years of exploring in the Brazilian Amazon. He is the son of Mrs. C. B. Archer, who lives at Mesilla Park, N. Mex. During World War I he served in the Army Medical Corps in France. Dr. Archer received his B. S. degree from State College of New Mexico, and his Ph. D. from the University of Michigan.

Following the wedding, a small reception was held at the home of Maj. and Mrs. Norman Kane.

Grunditz—Guillet

Underwood & Underwood
MRS. DONALD GRUNDITZ
. . . wed in white satin

White flowers decorated the Church of the Epiphany March 6 for the wedding of Miss Mary Harriet Guillet and Donald Warren Grunditz. The Rev. Charles W. Sheerin officiated and a reception followed in the church house.

Mrs. Grunditz is the daughter of Mrs. Joseph Phocian Guillet of Washington. Her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Hjalmar R. Grunditz of Minneapolis, Minn.

Given in marriage by her brother, William M. Guillet, Mrs. Grunditz wore a gown of white satin brocade, fashioned with medium length train. Her veil of illusion was held by a coronet of white freesia, and she carried a crescent bouquet of white roses and white freesia.

Miss Betty Guillet, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She was dressed in yellow faille and carried talisman roses and yellow freesia. The other attendants were Miss Edith Norris, Miss Virginia Nalls, Mrs. John Kester and Mrs. Russell Hightshue. Miss Norris and Miss Nall were costumed in medium green faille, while Mrs. Hightshue and Mrs Kester wore frocks of light green faille. All carried bouquets of jonquils and wore headdresses of jonquils and yellow freesia.

The bride attended George Washington University, where she was a member of Delta Zeta Sorority. The bridegroom attended the University of Minnesota. He was a member of Tau Beta Pi and Pi Tau Sigma honorary engineering fraternities.

Stumpner—Minske

Miss Maida Marian Minske, daughter of Mrs. Nellie Minske of Huron, S. Dak., and Louis Howard Stumpner, son of Mrs. Matilda Stumpner and Joseph Stumpner of Washington, were married March 6 in Foundry Methodist Church, the Rev. Frederick B. Harris officiating.

The bride wore a gown of white slipper satin fashioned with net yoke and long pointed sleeves. Her veil of illusion fell from a tiara of seed pearls, and she carried a shower bouquet of white roses and white carnations.

Miss Alrene Minske, sister of the bride, and Miss Elsie Stumpner, sister of the bridegroom, were bridesmaids. Joseph Austin Stumpner of Berwyn, Md., served as his brother's best man, and the ushers were Denny Harmon and Edward Napoli of Washington. of the bride's mother.

Your Questions On Homemaking

Where can I find someone to grind off an accumulation of burned grease on a cast aluminum griddle? It has passed the ammonia cloth stage. G. H. B.

There doesn't seem to be any place where you can have this job done. You will find, however, that if you place the griddle on the burner and heat, the deposit will soften sufficiently so that much of it can be scraped away. When this crust is broken, allow the griddle to cool and polish it with fine steel wool and a mild abrasive. Of course, if you succeed in removing all of the grease from the griddle, it will need to be reseasoned as you would a new utensil.

We have a solid aluminum clothesline that leaves a black mark on the white clothes. It will wash out in the next wash, but how can I clean the line so this doesn't rub off on the clothes? H. F. J.

Rub the line back and forth with a damp cloth until no black mark is left on the cloth. Now, while it is clean, rub it with a cloth moistened with liquid wax. Allow time to dry and go over again with a clean cloth to remove any excess wax. Repeat every month or so to keep a film of wax on the line.

The door of our portable radio has been marred terribly. It is made of plastic, I believe. Is there any place you know of where I could probably have it fixed? A. S. B.

The best way to repair the door on your radio is to replace it with a new one. To contact the firm which will order you one, call Republic 2180. When you call, give them the model number of your radio. This same firm also has a repair shop and will install the door if you wish.

Do you know of some firm which will reweave a linen tablecloth which has a hole burned in its about 6 inches in diameter? C. J. McL.

Look in the telephone book under "Weaving and Mending" for a firm to repair your tablecloth.

My daughter received a pair of pink fur bunny slippers for Christmas and already they are beginning to get dirty. Please tell me how I should go about cleaning them. P. C.

Stuff the slippers with paper or soft cloth to hold them in shape. Make a soap jelly by dissolving 1 cup of mild soap flakes in 2 cups of warm water. Allow to cool and when jelled, whip with an egg beater. Apply these suds to slippers with a brush—using a light circular motion. When the suds become soiled, scrape them off with a blunt knife and apply fresh suds. When slippers are cleaned, wipe away all suds, and, using a cloth wrung out of clear water, thoroughly rinse them. Work quickly so they do not become soaked. When clean and rinsed, put dry stuffing in them and place in an airy, warm place to dry. Brush fur occasionally during the drying process to fluff.

I am wondering if there is any solution, short of reupholstering, for a soiled and faded covering on a Duncan Phyfe sofa, with three cushions. I have tried cleaning with various upholstery cleaners, built without lasting effect. The material, a solid green with small pattern, is prewar, and to replace it would cost as much as the original cost of the sofa. I have heard of spraying dye on with the vacuum cleaner attachment. Do you believe this is possible, and if so will you please suggest the proper method? Probably a darker shade of the green would be the best color. A. O. L.

The method you suggest for applying dye to the upholstered fabric is not a familiar one. It seems it would be very difficult to get the dye onto the fabric evenly by this method and, if it was not applied evenly, the effect would be less attractive than it now is. Have you considered having slip covers made for the sofa? Carefully chosen and properly fitted, they are very attractive and would be less expensive than a reupholstery job.

We bought a second-hand baby coach when our child was an infant (four years ago). The leather in the hood has worn through and we'd like to find someone to recover it, or if that can't be done, we'd like a new or second-hand hood in good condition. Have you any information concerning the above? J. P. S.

Your baby coach hood can be recovered. Firms which repair carriages will send it to the factory in New York and the hood is returned directly to you. I am told that this can be done in from 7 to 12 days if sent now, but when the season really opens up it will take much longer. For further information about covering the hood, call Columbia 9611.

Biscuit and hot roll twists made with jam

New Packets of Biscuit Mixes Carry Old-Fashioned Flavors

You can have all the tantalizing appeal of fresh, home-baked rolls and biscuits from the new packaged mixes recently on the market. Here are some recipes:

BISCUIT TWISTS

1 egg, beaten
½ cup milk
2 tablespoons sugar
2 cups prepared biscuit mix
Melted butter
Raspberry jam
½ cup stale cookie crumbs

Combine egg, milk and sugar. Add to biscuit mix, stirring until a soft dough is formed. Knead gently on a floured board. Roll out into a rectangle. Brush with melted butter. Spread two thirds of dough with jam and sprinkle with crumbs. Fold the dough in thirds, folding the side without the jam mixture over first, then the side with the jam mixture. Cut into 1-inch wide slices. Give each slice a double twist. Place on a baking sheet. Bake in hot oven (400 degrees F.) about 15 minutes. Yield: about 12 twists

HOT ROLL TWISTS

1 package (14¼ oz.) prepared hot roll mix
Melted butter
Apricot jam
1 egg, beaten

Prepare dough as directed on package. Turn out on floured board and knead a few seconds. Cover with a bowl and allow to stand 10 minutes. Roll out into a rectangle. Brush with melted butter. Spread apricot jam over 2/3 of the dough. Fold, cut and twist dough as directed in Biscuit Twist recipe. Place on a greased baking sheet and cover with a dry towel. Allow to rise in a warm place (about 85° F.) until double in bulk, about 30 minutes. Brush egg over each twist. Bake in a hot oven (400° F.) about 15 minutes. Yield: 18 rolls.

QUICK TEA RING

1 package (14¼ oz.) prepared hot roll mix.
Melted butter.
2 teaspoons grated orange rind.
¼ cup sugar.
1 egg, beaten.

Prepare dough as directed on package. Turn out on floured board and knead a few seconds. Cover with a bowl and allow to stand 10 minutes. Roll into a rectangle. Brush with melted butter. Combine orange rind and sugar and sprinkle over dough. Roll dough as for a jelly roll. Pinch edges together. Cut in ½-inch slices. Place on greased baking sheet, overlapping each slice, clockwise for the outer circle and counterclockwise for the inner circle. Cover with a dry towel and let rise in a warm place (about 85° F.) until double in bulk, about 30 minutes. Brush egg over dough. Bake in moderate oven (375° F.) 25 minutes. Yield: one tea ring.

Only Five Minutes

Remember that clothes need only about five minutes of actual boiling to give them a good color. Too long boiling will tend to yellow the clothes. Add the juice of a lemon to the boiler of clothes if you wish real whiteness.

Very Convenient

One housewife has a shelf built underneath the drainboard in the kitchen, just low enough to accommodate her dishpan, and here she keeps her drainer, rinsing pan and dishpan out of sight but so convenient.

But more important than that, Petunia—you'll have better cookies, because you won't have to reroll the dough. Rerolled dough is always a little bit tougher.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Next Week We'll Be Trisecting Angles Again

For many years I have blindly accepted the geometric axiom that "things equal to the same thing are equal to each other." WTOP's Claude Mahoney has just freed me from this notion.

Mrs. Mahoney (they live at 1829 Summit pl. nw.) got a postcard recently from Alpha Chi Omega Sorority. It was one of those cards sent out to inform members of the group's activities—including, in this case, a sewing project. The card said:

"Sewers please bring finished pieces."

Claude did a double take at the word "sewers," muttered that it was no wonder foreigners had such a hard time mastering the English language, and dispatched the postcard to me.

That got me to thinking. A sewer who sews is spelled just like a sewer which drains waste water.

The first kind of sewer is pronounced exactly like a sower who sows stuff like wild oats. The second kind of sewer is pronounced like a suer who sues in court.

But sower isn't pronounced like suer and, what's even worse, sewer isn't pronounced like sewer.

MISCELLANY

The Grigsby people at 1426 K st. nw. didn't let me wonder long about that "reading lamp for people who wear bifocals." It has a stand of adjustable length so that the eyes of the reader remain shaded while the illumination is concentrated on the thing being read. Give me 20 or 30 years on this job and I'll know a thing or two . . . John C. Haley of 3214 13th st. nw. questions my conclusion that "pair" should take a singular pronoun. G. R. Cooley of 4317 15th st. nw. backs him up by asking whether I'd say "A pair of twins took its seat." That one is easy. Twins are two people; a pair of twins must therefore be four people, and if they all took one seat they'd be mighty uncomfortable . . . (Seriously, grammarians, I'll admit I'm wrong if you'll admit that you can't agree among yourselves) . . . All of which reminds me that Charles Gant of 9905 Cherry Tree lane, Silver Spring, Md., has a sound suggestion for our New Words Dept. items. Charlie points out that we should call them "portmanteau" words instead of neologisms because Webster says a portmanteau word is "formed by arbitrary combination of two words, to suggest something of the sense of each" . . . See what I mean? Twenty more years of this and I'll be literate.

PERSONAL NOTES

Barbara Bennett, 312 Cumberland ave., Chevy Chase, Md.: It's the only face I've got. Be kind to it.

Dorothy Loughrey, 1223 Pleasant st. se.: I'm really not as sad as I was pictured. But if you think it would cheer me up to come to your sorority's St. Patrick's Day dance, I'll come. (Zeta Chapter of Chi Sigma Sorority, Silver Hill Club, Silver Hill, Md., March 12, 9 p. m.)

NATS FIND A SLUGGER

My agents in Florida pass along a story from the Nats' spring training camp.

While WINX Sportscaster Bob Wolff was in camp making transcribed interviews with the athletes, Manager Joe Kuhel permitted Wolff to work out with the team.

WOLFF

Wolff used to be a crackerjack baseball player in his school days, and he still loves to play the game whenever he gets a chance. So there he was, chasing flies in the outfield and having a wonderful time.

On his last day in Florida, Bob asked Kuhel: "Joe, how about letting me hit a couple?"

"Sure," agreed the Nats' boss. "This ought to be good."

Out on the mound for batting practice was Joe Bowman, who used to be a big league pitcher and now manages a Washington farm club. Kuhel winked to Bowman, and the hurler nodded his understanding.

Whammo! The ball sailed far down the leftfield line and splattered against the garden wall.

Clark Griffith got out of his car and edged up for a better look. A hush came over the diamond, as all hands stopped to watch.

"Hey, Joe," called Kuhel. "Let's try that again." Bowman nodded, and pitched carefully. Same results.

Socko! Far out in left field, the ball again sailed serenely over the heads of the flychasers.

Wolff tossed the bat aside as casually as he could, and trotted past the coaching box where Kuhel stood watching in obvious disbelief. As he passed the manager, Bob called out airily:

"When you realize how much the team needs me, Joe, I'll be ready to talk terms."

SPRING POEM

Mrs. Paul Cooksey of 479 N. Grant ave., Manassas, Va., not only writes a bright gardening column for the Manassas Messenger, but finds time to knock out such lines as these:

Sun warm,
Brow wet.
Sweater gone,
Feel all set.

Sneeze once,
Nose red.
Fevered brow,
Sick in bed.

Listen to Bill Gold each noon, Monday through Saturday, over WINX (1340) and WINX-FM (96.3).

Leonard Lyons . . .

HOLLYWOOD.—Albert D. Lasker, who is vacationing here, heard the word "Genius" applied to a film producer. Lasker shook his head and deplored the frequency with which this descriptive is being used . . . "I could take a bum off the streets, dress him in good clothes, then place him behind a fine desk in a big office," said Lasker, "and if I then had 30 men I knew walk by his office door—and if I were to say to these 30 men, 'That man in here is a genius,' in a short time everbody in America would be saying that he is a genius . . . And furthermore," added Lasker, "the bum would believe it, too."

Elsie Mendl, the venerable decorator and party-giver, listened to a group of film actors discussing the newest pharmaceutical items, the sleep-inducing and invigorating pills which are so popular here. One of the guests mentioned a new drug, and Lady Mendl expressed an interest in it. "I think I'd better warn you, Elsie," said the guest, "I hear this drug is habit-forming." . . . "Habit-forming?" replied the 92-year-old Lady Mendl. "At my age it makes no difference. Any habit that develops in me can't last long."

John Steinberg, who manages the Hillcrest Country Club here, offered advice to Felix Young, owner of Le Patillon, on how to develop a cafe star and popularize a night club. Steinberg told him of the New York days when he and Christo, operating as John & Christo, opened the Plantation Club atop the Winter Garden Theater, and hired the then-unknown Florence Mills to entertain there . . . In the first week all arriving customers were told, "Sorry, but all the tables are reserved. You need a reservation." And when somebody phoned for a reservation, the manager would say: "Sorry, but we're all booked up. How about a week from Thursday?" For the first week the club remained empty, while the owners waged this campaign to make cafe patrons believe it was impossible to get a table. It made them fight to get in, and the Plantation was jammed from then on.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Party Puzzle: Who If Not Truman?

By Drew Pearson

It has now been nearly four years since Democratic Party moguls met at a secret White House dinner and persuaded Franklin Roosevelt to accept Senator Truman of Missouri as Vice President. They knew then, of course, that the chances of FDR's living through the next four years were slim.

Hannegan

Present at that dinner were Ed Flynn of the Bronx, Mayor Ed Kelly of Chicago, Mayor Hague of Jersey City, and Bob Hannegan. Today, almost the same Democratic moguls convene at the White House. And despite this week's announcement that Truman is a candidate, they still hope they can deftly dislodge from office the man they put in.

They know in advance that this will not be easy—for two reasons: (1) the embarrassment of breaking the news to Truman; (2) finding another candidate who can win.

Two years ago all this would have been easy. At that time, Truman himself was saying he did not want to be President. But no man likes to retreat under fire, and Truman's ideas on this are well-illustrated by the stanch support given such friends as Ed Pauley and Brig. Gen. Wallace Graham when they were under fire for speculating.

However, the party moguls have promised each other privately that they will be hardboiled and tell the President the truth—namely that the chance of victory with him at the head of the ticket is nil.

If they do this, then finding a candidate to take Truman's place will not be easy. Chief Justice Fred Vinson of Kentucky would be acceptable to the South, but wouldn't arouse too much enthusiasm in the North. Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas is a great administrator and would have the advantage of probably persuading Henry Wallace to withdraw. Henry Kaiser would be popular in the West, with labor and with small businessmen.

However, it takes time to build up any candidate. And while it's not too late, the sooner the Democrats get busy the better their chances.

Secret Jim Crow Vote

The voting record was ordered burned and every Congressman was sworn to secrecy when the House Appropriations Committee voted on the dynamite-laden subject of barring Federal money to universities and hospitals which refuse to admit Negroes.

Secret, also, was the word passed down by Republican leaders against this anti-Jim Crow amendment. However, Congressman Frank Keefe of Wisconsin, Republican, was adamant that his party go on record one way or the other for a practical application of civil rights.

Most vigorous opposition to Keefe's amendment, during the secret committee debate, came from Florida's Democratic Joe Hendricks.

The Secret Roll Call

Hendricks was followed by George Andrews of Alabama, Albert Gore of Tennessee, Jamie Whitten of Mississippi, John Kerr of North Carolina, George Mahon of Texas and Albert Thomas of Texas, who pleaded that the South be given time to work out its tough Negro problem.

Backed against the wall, Keefe got little help from his Republican colleagues.

"There is no discrimination by the tax collector," he argued. "He collects taxes from whites and Negroes alike. Yet Negroes can't be admitted to universities and hospitals which they help pay for."

"Disease knows no racial barriers," Keefe continued. "With Negro life expectancy 10 years less than whites, it presents a serious problem."

In the final secret vote, Keefe was deserted by all his Republican colleagues except three: Gordon Canfield of New Jersey, Ralph Church of Illinois and Karl Andersen of Minnesota. Two Northern Democrats, Thomas O'Brien of Illinois and John Fogarty of Rhode Island, also voted with him.

The 25 Congressmen who secretly voted against the amendment were: Republicans—Taber, N. Y.; Wigglesworth, Mass.; Plumley, Vt.; Engel, Mich.; Johnson, Ind.; Jensen, Iowa; Ploeser, Mo.; Tibbott, Pa.; Fenton, Pa.; Griffiths, Ohio; Stockman, Oreg.; Scrivener, Kans.; Clevenger, Ohio.

Democrats—Cannon, Mo.; Kerr, N. C.; Mahon, Tex.; Sheppard, Calif.; Thomas, Tex.; Hendricks, Fla.; Norrell, Ark.; Gore, Tenn.; Whitten, Miss.; Andrews, Ala.; Gary, Va.; Bates, Ky.

Our way to help

We walk and run and use our hands . . . To live from day to day . . . And seldom we appreciate . . . Our chance to work and play . . . For there are others in this world . . . Whose limbs are not so strong . . . And who must struggle twice as hard . . . To live and get along . . . Especially the little ones . . . Who need a crutch or two . . . Or have to have a chair or bed . . . For everything they do . . . The crippled children who are sad . . . But never once complain . . . About their fortune or their fate . . . Or even any pain . . . So let our purses be prepared . . . To answer all appeals . . . And help these brave young boys and girls . . . By buying Easter Seals.

Sen. Langer Seeks To Amend Law on Veterans' Perference

VETERANS: An important bill to amend the Veterans' Preference Act has been drafted by Chairman Langer of the Senate Civil Service Committee. Several Senators may join with Langer in sponsoring it.

Briefly, the bill would cut down on the superpreference given veterans when lay offs are made. For layoff purposes, the bill would credit each veteran with 10 additional years of service in addition to what he has actually served. In other words, if he had five years of service he'd be credited with 15 years. But the bill would prevent him from "bumping" a nonveteran career employe of 25 and 30 years which is now the case.

Langer referred to this phase of the Veterans' Preference Act in a Senate speech yesterday in which he discussed many shortcomings in the Federal service. He told the Senate:

That nonveteran men and women with permanent status, excellent efficiency ratings and 25 and 30 years of service are being displaced overnight by young GIs and WACs who have preference. At that point, Langer turned to his colleagues and shouted:

"I wonder how many Senators would be inclined to take sick leave if tomorrow some young man or woman could walk in and say, 'Mr. Senator, I have preference. You are out and I am in.'" In effect, Langer was defending the Federal sick leave system.

Incidentally, the Civil Service Commission may be forced to change its reduction-in-force rules before the Congress can act on the proposed Langer bill. The Supreme Court has agreed to hear the Hilton case, which challenges these rules and the preference given veterans. A nonveteran, Hilton was laid off from the Charleston (S. C.) Navy Yard after 12 years of service. Veterans with fewer years of service were retained. The layoff rules must be changed if the court rules in Hilton's favor.

STORY: A new employe from way down South in Mississippi was transferred recently to the Navy personnel office here. Not long afterward he was asked to figure out the annual leave an employe had who was to resign.

The Mississippian gave the employe credit for 25 days. A quick count by his supervisor came to 26 days. They then went over the leave record together. The supervisor, spotting the error, told his new employe:

"I see your mistake. You charged this fellow with May 30 of last year. May 30 is Memorial Day, a holiday."

"That's no mistake," came back the Southerner, "May 30 is a Yankee holiday and we don't have anything to do with it down where I come from."

HELP: Stenographers and typists are needed by the Immigration and Naturalization Service, which is to be moved back here soon from Philadelphia. Applicants can get full details at INS offices in the Hutchins Building, 10th and D sts. nw.

The President, just a few days ago, formally approved the return here of INS after April 1. Of its 855 employes, 530 will move back. The agency will allow some employes with families to stay in Philadelphia until June to allow their children to complete the school term.

NOTES: Herbert Marks, former Atomic Energy general counsel, has opened up his own law office in the Ring Building . . . Bernice Dismukes of Farmers Home, is the first Agriculture employe to receive a cash award for a meritorious suggestion. She was given $50 . . . The Patent Office orchestra needs additional musicians. It practices Tuesday evenings in the Commerce auditorium.

ARMY JOBS: These are among the jobs open in the Military District of Washington: firefighter, $2694; fire prevention inspector, $2895, and property control officer, $3776 to $4149. Get further information in Room 2-E-1030 of The Pentagon.

MEETING: The American Society for Public Administration will stage its annual conference here at the Statler tomorrow through Sunday. Many Federal problems will be discussed such as the employe loyalty program, possible further decentralization of the Government from this city, job classification, and administration of the European Recovery Program, among others.

PAY HEARINGS: An increase of 50 cents an hour for the 500,000 per diem, or Wage Board, employes was proposed yesterday to the House Civil Service Committee. The plea was made by N. P. Alifas of the International Association of Machinists.

Alifas said that the Wage Board system has been "ineffectual and disappointing." He pointed out that the salaries of per diems are fixed by wage boards, but he accused the boards of failing to consider the soaring cost of living as a factor in fixing wages.

He said a 50-cent-an-hour increase would give the average per diem an increase of about $1000 a year.

VA: Represenative Hulter (D., N. Y.) yesterday introduced a bill to provide for the rehiring of all employes fired from Veterans since March 1 because of the lack of funds. His bill also would prevent future firings unless the supervisor and regional director certified that proposed layoffs would not impair efficiency and service.

2d Gunman Is Held as Member of Fierst Gang

Police Believe Paroled Convict May Be Linked To Lewis Slaying

Two paroled gunmen believed to have the answers to a series of District holdups and the gangland slaying of a third former convict were held in Baltimore yesterday.

Matuszak

Bronislous Matuszak, 41, alias Robert Melton, was arrested by Baltimore police late yesterday morning and before nightfall had been linked with at least two robberies here.

Police also questioned him as possible driver of the car in which 45-year-old Hunter Lewis, may have taken his "last ride." Lewis' decomposed body was found in underbrush off a little-used road near Laurel, Md., Tuesday.

Fierst Identified

Also questioned, and definitely identified with four Washington robberies, was Mack Wilson Fierst, 37, who was arrested in Baltimore Monday.

Piecing together a gangland story rivaling hte bootleg wars of the 1920s, authorities saw Fierst, Matuszak and the slain Lewis as a three-man gang. All are paroled robbers.

Lewis died, the police theorize, after acting as the fingerman in proposed robbery of Rockway Towers on Washington blvd., near Laurel. He obtained employment there, possibly to "case" the place; then changed his mind and tipped off the management to thwart the robbery, authorities believe.

That a third man was along when Lewis was slain was indicated by the fact that Fierst was too badly wounded to drive the car. When arrested, he had three healing bullet wounds in his face, neck and shoulder.

Blonde Also Held

Also held and questioned in Baltimore was a 32-year-old blonde with whom Fierst had been living and who, police say, treated his wounds. A doctor has been located who refused to treat him.

Arrest of Fierst, Washington police say, helps clear:

The $7398 payroll robbery of the Darby Printing Co., 2414 Douglas st. ne., December 17; the $3000 robbery of the manager of the Acme Super Market, 1531 F st. ne., September 27; the $138 holdup of a Miss America Candy Store, 1306 G st. nw., and the $130 robbery of a Safeway Store at 8th and F sts. ne.

Representatives of the printing company and the Super Market definitely identified him; photos linked him with the candy store holdup and plates on the Safeway holdup car were found in a garage police said Fierst used in Baltimore.

Fingerprints Matched

Fingerprints found on the automobile abandoned after the printing company job match those of Matuszak, Washington police say.

Fierst and Matuszak have been identified with the $7575 payroll robbery of the Haynes Lithograph Co. in Silver Spring December 17, in which two employes were locked in the trunk of their car after three men took the money.

Identification of Lewis' body was difficult because of its decomposed condition, but metropolitan police say he answers description of one of the three men in the Darby company robbery.

Maryland authorities want Fierst for at least one Baltimore robbery. They report he had been identified in a $5000 robbery in St. Marys County last November.

He also is being questioned in the death of Night Club Bouncer Peter J. Zingo, whose body was found in his parked car on a Baltimore street last July.

Autopsy on Lewis

An autopsy performed on Lewis yesterday disclosed only two bullet wounds—one in the head and one in the left hand. Only one of the slugs was recovered—a .32-caliber. Only weapon found on Fierst when he was arrested was a .45-caliber automatic.

In a garage police said he had rented, however, they found stolen license plates from Maryland and the District, a black jack, 10 pairs of handcuffs, a .30-caliber rifle and ammunition.

Fierst was sentenced to 6 to 12 years from the District in 1939 for his part in the $9500 payroll robbery of the Charles H. Tompkins Co., and was paroled after about five years.

Lewis was paroled in January of 1947 after serving part of a 25-year term for robbery in Maryland.

Matuszak was sentenced to 10 years in the Maryland Penitentiary in 1937 for a haberdashery holdup in Baltimore. He was transferred to the penal farms near Hagerstown in 1941 and escaped. Returned to the penitentiary, he was paroled in May of 1945.

Vandalism at Closed Davis School Is Seen as 'Innocent'; Demand for Community Center Use of Building Spurred

LACK OF RECREATION FACILITIES FORCES DAVIS SCHOOL PUPILS TO PLAY IN STREETS

By V. R. Montanari
Post Reporter

"When boys don't have recreational facilities, they'll make their own, one way or another."

According to Mrs. Saul Weisser, chairman of the recreation committee of the Adelaide Davis School P-TA, that is why several youths broke into the former Davis school building, now unused, and made a classroom into a crude basketball court on Monday.

The one story temporary building, which contains five classrooms, a principal's office and four lavatories, is adjacent to the modern, 2-year-old plant that now houses the Davis School at 44th and H sts. se. Built during the war, the temporary building was used for four years.

The youths' actions, which included the gouging of two holes in partitions of the old building, and some minor damage as well, will spur the P-TA members to renew demands for use of the abandoned school as a community recreation center in the fast growing Bradbury Heights area, said Mrs. Seymour Mintz, chairman of the group.

Mrs. Helen R. Maguire, principal of Davis, who knows her children and the older ones in the neighborhood pretty well, quickly found out who was involved in the affair.

"They are not bad boys," she said yesterday. "I taught them, and I know."

P-TA members met yesterday and discused the problem. A petition to the Recreation Board already bears several hundred names.

"That temporary building has stodd there unused for two years and just begs to be vandalized," said Mrs. Weisser. Several windows were broken and other damage done before the recent occurrence.

The school playground contains a jungle gym, sandbox, slide, parallel bars and some swings, and a cement area for ball games.

"That is all we have, not only for the 350 children who go to the Davis School, but also for the hundreds of preschool, junior high and high school children in the entire area," said the recreation committee head. The area, she said, includes housing developments in nearby Maryland, whose children cross the line continuously.

"The nearest bowling alley is about 3 miles away by bus," she said, "the nearest boys' club, 5 miles, the nearest library, also 5 miles."

The area served by the Davis School is bounded by Massachusetts ave., Texas ave. and Benning rd.

A previous suggestion that the Old Davis building be used for recreation brought an answer from the Recreation Board that additional funds for the Davis playground were turned down in the 1949 budget. A shelter building for the Ridge playground near Ft. Dupont is planned for construction in the 1949 fiscal year if funds are approved.

Harry S. Wender, chairman of the Recreation Board, said yesterday he did not know the situation in Bradbury Heights. He pointed out that "it is difficult to keep up with new, fast-growing areas, and when you take a school building over for recreation, it takes $5000 to $10,000 to equip and man it for that purpose."

He added that a hearing to be held at 8 p. m. Tuesday at the Recreation Board offices would give such groups an opportunity to be heard on recreation needs.

Jury Goes Out In Peckham Abortion Case

A District Court jury of nine men and three women yesterday at 3:45 p. m. began deliberating charges of abortion against Dr. Henry L. Peckham, jr., after Prosecutor Charles Murray declared a Government witness "sold himself away from the Government's case."

Murray's blast delivered in his closing argument was aimed at James P. Fox, a cab driver, who had testified that Dr. Peckham was not the same doctor with whom he had dealings as go-between.

Previously Fox had identified Peckham at grand jury proceeding from photographs then shown him.

"I'm condemning a vicious and vile act," Murray shouted, referring to Fox's testimony that he had entered the office of another doctor near Peckham's office which is situated at 428 8th st. se.

Objections Overruled

"He is trying to throw guilt into the office of an innocent man," the prosecutor pursued.

Objections by Defense Attorneys H. Mason Welch and Dorsey Offutt to Murray's attack on Fox were overruled by Associate Justice David A. Pine.

Peckham was charged with performing illegal operations January 3 and 5, 1947, on Mrs. Hubert Stottlemyer, a former resident of Washington.

Mrs. Stottlemyer was unable to identify him as the physician who treated her but she did tell the court she observed the name "Peckham" on the door plate of the office she visited on January 3.

One defense witness had testified to being present in the doctor's office at the time Mrs. Stottlemyer was supposed to have been treated and declared that no one resembling the latter appeared.

Other witnesses testified the physician was present at a dinner party at Offutt's apartment in the Cavalier Apartments on January 5, when the second operation was alleged to have taken place.

The charges against Peckham were an outgrowth of the recent trial of Attorney James J. Laughlin. In this case Stottlemyer said he was a go-between and testified he had asked Peckham to perform the same operation on a friend that he had done for his wife. Peckham and Laughlin were acquitted of all charges.

School-Church Classes Closed In 2 Md. Towns

Religious Teaching Ends Temporarily At Gaithersburg And Rockville

Religious education classes in Rockville and Gaitherburg public schools were ordered suspended yesterday, pending plans to transfer them to non-school properties.

The definite recognition of Monday's Supreme Court ruling outlawing such practice was taken as school and church officials concerned with other nearby Maryland and Virginia school-church programs awaited legal interpretation of the decision.

Rev. Karl G. Newell, pastor of Grace Methodist Church, Gaithersburg, announced classes in religious instruction for 180 third, fourth and fifth grade pupils of Gaithersburg Elementary School are being stopped. The action, he said, was taken following conference yesterday with Miss Esther Lomb, director of weekday church schools of the Maryland-Delaware Council of Churches and Christian Education. The classes may be resumed later on non-school property.

Rev. J. Virgil Lilly, pastor of Rockville Christian Church, announced suspension of the three religious classes conducted for the fourth grade of Rockvile Elementary School "pending a more definite interpretation of the Supreme Court ruling."

The classes, Lilly said, may be resumed at their former locale in the Scout Building on a released-time basis (school permission to attend during a specified school hour.)

Sponsors of similar school-church classes at Sandy Spring, Mount Rainier, Brentwood and Cottage City, Md., elementary schools said they were awaiting further word before acting.

In Arlington, County School Superintendent Fletcher Kemp, said decision was up to the county school board. He said interdenominational religious classes are conducted on a voluntary attendance basis in elementary schools. The classes are taught by three teachers paid by the County Council on Religious Education, which is supported in part by Community Chest funds.

Fairfax County operates a similar program under similar sponsorship, according to Mrs. Mark Regan, Falls Church school board chairman. In Falls Church, fifth and sixth grade pupils of the Jefferson and Madison schools attend weekly classes. She said the matter would be decided by the Fairfax County school board.

School officials in the District and in Alexandria, Va., said they were unaffected by the court ruling.

As Strike Goes On

House Group, GSI Blamed By Mediator

George E. Strong, conciliator in the GSI cafeteria dispute, last night blamed GSI and the Hoffman Labor Committee for the breakdown of his efforts to settle the 66-day-old strike.

Strong, an attorney and former Army colonel, announced the complete frustration of his peacemaking attempts in a report to Federal Works Administrator Philip B. Fleming.

Strong was appointed conciliator by Fleming more than three weeks ago, when the White House ordered Fleming to get the dispute settled.

In his report to Fleming—the Government's "landlord" of the Federal building cafeterias—Strong wrote:

"The activities of this committee (the House subcommittee that has been investigating the strike under direction of Representative Clare E. Hoffman (R., Mich.), have made settlement of the strike almost impossible.

"Just when I thought I had the strike settled, the subcommittee would get in contact with GSI, or issue subpenas, or hold a hearing at which GSI's representatives would make commitments under oath which they could not modify to effect a settlement."

Strong told The Washington Post that GSI's tactics in the last stages of this efforts early this week indicated to him the corporation "is intent on breaking this union."

The union is Local 471 of the CIO Cafeteria Workers (UWPA).

It was GSI's insistence on amending Strong's settlement proposal of March 3, he said, that finally caused the conciliation to bog down. The corporation even turned down a compromise amendment proposed by Strong, which "would have met GSI's objections," Strong said. The union already had accepted the whole proposal.

Fleming Has No Comment

Fleming, who made no comment on Strong's report, has the power to determine any of GSI's concessions on 60 days' notice.

About 1000 union members have been picketing the 40 operating cafeterias. They sought a 15-cent hourly raise, and walked out when GSI refused to negotiate until union leaders filed non-Communist affidavits.

On Capitol Hill, Hoffman's committee was preparing a report on its GSI hearings for presentation to the full Education and Labor Committee. In addition to a summary of the testimony, it will contain a statement of the refusal of Presidential Assistant John R. Steelman to heed two subpenas, one member said. Hoffman wanted to question Steelman on what he called an attempt by the Administration to by-pass the Taft-Hartley Act in seeking to settle the strike.

Also in the report, it was said, will be the names of four union leaders who, Hoffman says, refused to answer questions.

Board Seeks Public Views On Symphony

The public is invited to tell the National Symphony Orchestra's board or directors and Conductor Hans Kindler what it thinks of them at the orchestra association special meeting slated for 8 p. m. tomorrow in the Commerce Department auditorium.

Frank R. Jelleff, acting board president, yesterday said he hoped "anyone having any opinion about the orchestra and its administration and leadership will be present to express his views and to take part in the discussion."

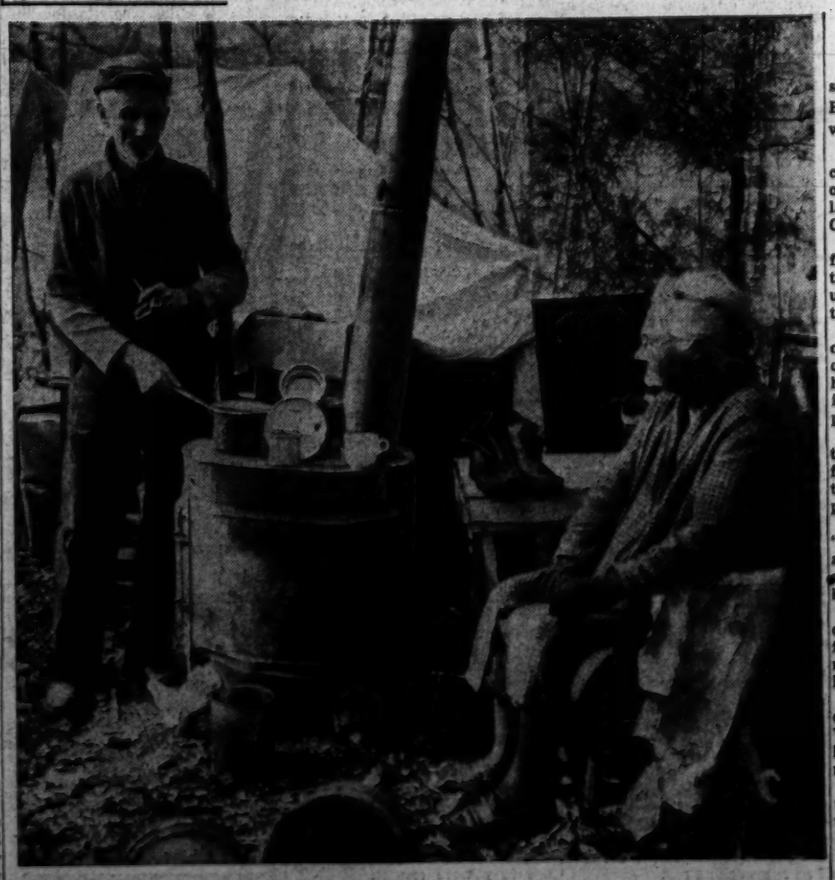
Earlier announcements of the meeting—the first extraordinary session in eight years—had limited attendance to orchestra association members.

The special meeting, Jelleff said, seeks a "clear and honest expression of the public's feelings" about the board's administration of the orchestra and Dr. Kindler's leadership. Only association members, however, will vote on resolutions presented at the meeting.

An up-to-date report on the drive for funds is also scheduled. The auditorium is on 14th st. between E st. and Constitution ave. nw.

Moved From Hen House

Jobless Couple Makes 'Home' in Outdoors



By Harry Goodwin—The Washington Post

MR. AND MRS. GEORGE SACHS AT THEIR FAIRFAX "HOME" IN THE WOODS

By John London
Post Reporter

Poets can wax lyrical about the sky as a roof, the earth as a carpet. But not George Sachs, 67, and his wife, Martha, 65.

Buffeted by bad luck, the elderly couple has made a "home" in the outdoors, on a wooded patch of land off Lee blvd. in Fairfax County, Va.

Evicted and jobless, George found a haven for himself and wife three months ago in a hen house—until last Monday, when he chose the outdoors.

George, German-born, a vigorous individualist, worked for a construction company. He lost the home the concern provided when it stood in the way of a housing project going up.

Fairfax Community Chest paid two weeks' rent for his wife in a farmer's attic located by the County Board of Public Welfare. He paid his own rent.

Then he lost his job and for "personal" reasons left the attic and wandered through the countryside withi s wife in quest of a home.

Mrs. Lucy B. Thompson, owner of 85 acres off Lee blvd., near Fairfax Circle, was sympathetic. She moved the hens out of her winter hen house.

But Mrs. Sachs, who is half Indian—a native of Stanardsvile, Va., found the hen house bad for her "breathing," neuralgia and rheumatism.

Monday night they used a section of a box spring mattress on the ground as a bed. They spread borrowed canvas on overhanging branches. George got up every few hours to restoke the ancient wood-burning stove about which they huddled, under seven blankets. For food, there are store left-overs provided by the Thompsons.

Mrs. Sachs, rocking in a chair in the woods yesterday, wore a cotton dress, bathrobe and moccasins. She dons her husband's overcoat at night. He wears four pairs of pants.

Mrs. Sachs faced the cold future stoically and George smoked his pipe, talking about a job as building janitor or general handyman on a farm, maybe, and a place out of the wind's and rain's way.

Sewage Disposal Plant Meeting Set Tomorrow

Manassas, Va., March 10 (Spl.).—A proposal to construct a sewage disposal plant in the Triangle section of Prince William County will be discussed at a mass meeting at the Triangle Baptist Church at 8 p. m. tomorrow.

According to tentative plans, the plant would serve homes on both sides of Route 1 between the Triangle Service Center and the entrance to the Quantico Marine Reservation. Construction costs would be paid through a public bond issue, subject to a vote of residents of the area.

Lundberg to Speak

Arling ton County Manager A. T. Lundberg will speak on operation of the county government at the regular meeting of the Arlington Junior Chamber of Commerce today at 12:30 p. m. at Virginia Manor, Washington blvd. and Glebe rd.

Area News in Brief

Cases of Measles Decreasing Here

Measles cases are on the decline here despite a general Nationwide increase since the first of the year, the Health Department revealed yesterday.

Dr. James G. Cumming, director of the Preventable Disease Bureau, said 159 cases were reported last week, compared with are previous week's 194. A total of 109 cases had been reported through Wednesday this week, but Dr. Cumming said that didn't "necessarily" indicate an increase.

"As the picture looks now," he said, "we aren't going to have one of the bad epidemics we usually have every two to four years."

The American Red Cross said yesterday that nited States Public Health Service had reported the highest number of measles cases through the Nation since 1944.

Fire Damages Home

Fire of undetermined origin did about $400 damage yesterday to the home of Theodore Mitchell, 200 block Payne st., Alexandria, directly across the street from Alexandria's No. 5 Fire House.

Firemen confined the blaze to a corner of the dining room. The family was away.

Fast Honolulu Flight

Beginning March 21, Washingtonians will be able to leave here at 5 p. m. and arrive at Honolulu in time for dinner the next evening, according to Clyde Doran, district traffic manager for United Airlines.

This will be made possible by 30-hour direct service in Douglas DC-6s via direct connection at San Francisco, it was announced.

Elapsed time from San Francisco to Honolulu will be 9½ hours, or about 2½ hours less than is now required by DC-4s.

Nightmare' More So

The activities of Leroy Johnson, 20, 31 P st. ne., on the night of March 2, continued to haunt him in Municipal Court yesterday.

Already convicted and sentenced to a $300 fine or 90 days in jail on three charges of tampering with automobiles on that night, Johnson yesterday was fined $100 or 120 days on a larceny charge and held to the grand jury in $1000 bond on a charge of housebreaking.

Johnson's charges yesterday grew out of the fact that when he was arrested March 2 he had clothing with him he could not identify as his own.

A short while after his arrest, a housebreaking was reported at 712 4th st. ne. The clothing was reported stolen from that address.

Smoot Quits Federation

Albert A. Smoot, former president of the Alexandria Community Chest, yesterday resigned as vice president of the Chest Federation of the National Capital area. Smoot said his candidacy for Alexandria city council would not leave him sufficien ttime for Chest work.

Kidnap Case Argued, Goes To Jury Today

A District Court jury today will be asked to decide whether George Paul Harding, 36, of 3900 Macomb st. nw., kidnaped his former sweetheart at gunpoint and beat her until she promised to marry him.

The Government and the defense delivered closing arguments yesterday after Harding denied that he had abducted the girl, Alsace Lorraine McCormick, 29, of 24 8th st. ne.

Federal Judge Ben Moore, visiting jurist from West Virginia, directed the jury to return a not guilty verdict on the second of six indictments against the defendant, charging him with assault with intent to kill. The action was taken after Defense Attorney Myron Erlich introduced a motion that insufficient evidence had been presented to support that charge.

Mrs. McCormick, who is separated from her husband, had asserted she was forced from the car of a boy friend, Leon Gurevitz, 221 15th st. se., by Harding last September 26.

She said Harding, at gunpoint, drove her in his car to Maryland where he beat her and threatened her with death until she promised to marry him. Later, she said, he sneaked into Providence Hospital where she was being treated for her injuries and struck her as she lay in bed.

Harding told the court that the girl had accompanied him voluntarily. He testified that when he discovered her in Gurevitz's car he said, "This is it. Now I wouldn't marry you on a bet."

It was then, he said, that the girl followed him into his car and the ride into Maryland ensued.

He admitted slapping Mrs. McCormick, claiming he did it "because she had lied to me."

Earlier, Judge Moore upheld a defense motion that Porsecutor William Hitz be barred from questioning Harding about a past manslaughter conviction. The motion was based on a full pardon for past violations granted by President Truman to all who were honorably discharged from the armed forces in World War 11. Harding, who served 2½ years in the Army during the war, had been convicted about 15 years ago in the shooting of another man.

Moore made his ruling after Erlich cited a Supreme Court decision that such pardons have the effect of obliterating misdeeds to the degree that they may be considered as never having occurred.

Republicans Face Primary Contests In Adams County

Gettysburg, Pa., March 10 (Spl.). Adams County Republicans face contests for most of the important offices to be voted on at the April primary.

County Chairman John H. Basehore, seeking reelection, is opposed by George W. Naugle, Gettysburg, and there are two women candidates for the county vice chairmanship, Mrs. Esther Hayberger and Mrs. Mervin Tipton. Assemblyman Francis Worley, seeking a fourth term in the General Assembl , is opposed for the GOP nomination by George P. Black, retired Gettysburg assistant postmaster.

The Republicans have three candidates for the county's single seat on the Republican State Committee. Frank J. Slonaker, the incumbent; Dr. Eugene Elgin, East Berlin, and Clarence C. Smith, clerk to the county commissioners, are the candidates.

Along with Republicans of Franklin County, GOP party members will choose between Attorney Donald P. McPherson, jr., Gettysburg; P. Emory Weaver of Littlestown, and Samuel J. Thomas, Chambersburg, for the district seat in the State Senate.

There are no Democratic contests for nominations for either of the legislative posts.

2 Bolling Field Soldiers Held in Robbery Inquiry

Two Bolling Field soldiers are being held in the reported assault-robbery of two District men in Prince Georges County early March 3, authorities at the air base disclosed yesterday.

Apprehended by the Army's criminal investigation division were Pfc. Steve McGuffin, 25, Middlesboro, Ky., and Pfc. Joseph R. Longo, 22, of Neuenburg, Pa., both of whom are slated to be turned over to Prince Georges County police today for further investigation. The CID said McGuffin was placed in "protective custody" the day after the holdup, while Longo was arrested Tuesday.

The two were arrested in connection with robberies reported by John Andrews, Bolling Field maintenance supervisor, and Ernest Cage, a one-legged Army veteran, both of whom claimed they were assaulted and robbed by two men who followed them from a tavern just outside the District.

According to Lieut. Col. M. F. Ritterbush, Bolling Field provost marshal, McGuffin and Longo admitted being with Andrews and Cage but denied the robbery charges.

Sanitarium Will Open At Williamsport Soon

Hagerstown, Md., March 10 (Spl.).—A sanitarium for convalescent and aged people will open in nearby Williamsport next week under supervision of a former Washington, D. C., couple.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Hartle, both registered nurses, have purchased the stone residence formerly occupied by the late Representative William Byron, near the center of the town, for conversion into a 21-bed convalescent home to be known as Williamsport Sanitarium. The remodeled quarters will be exhibited to the public for the first time on Sunday at an open house between 1 and 7 p. m.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Hartle are graduates of the Takoma Park Sanitarium, and have practiced in Washington for many years. Hartle was in charge of the health center at the Washington YMCA, while his wife is former obstetrical supervisor at Columbia Hospital.

South Mountain Fair Revival Being Planned

Gettysburg, Pa., March 10 (Spl.). Steps to revive the traditional South Mountain Fair, held annually prior to theoutbreak of World War II, have been taken by a group of residents of Adams County.

President of the newly-reorganized South Mountain Fair Association is Arnold C. Orner, Arendtsville banker, whose father, P. S. Orner, served as president for more than 20 years. The latter has been named honorary president of the association, which plans its first postwar exhibit September 15-18.

Other new officers are Robert C. Lott, Aspers, first vice president; George Schriver, Bendersville, second vice president; Clarence J. Waybright, Gettysburg, third vice president; Harvey B. Raffensperger, Arendtsville, secretary; W. Clayton Jester, Biglerville, assistant secretary; Elmer W. Warren, Gettysburg, treasurer, and David Houck, Arendtsville, assistant treasurer.

Charles Town Lawyer Files in Congress Race

Charleston, W. Va., March 10 (Spl).—James M. Mason, 3d, of Charles Town, today filed his certificate of candidacy for the Democratic nomination to Congress from the Second District with W. S. O'Brien, secretary of State. The fifth candidate seeking the nomination, he is the first to file from the State's eastern panhandle.

Mason, 46, is a practicing attorney in Charles Town and president of the Jefferson County Bar Association. He served as prosecuting attorney of the county during the war in the absence of Prosecutor John C. Skinner, who left his post temporarily for duty with the Army.

Page County Board Favors Same Tax Rate

Luray, Va., March 10 (Spl).—A tax rate which represents no increase over last year has been approved by the Page County supervisors to finance this year's budget, set for hearing on April 12.

Tax rates approved by the board include $1.70 for the school levy; 25 cents for the county levy, and sinking fud levies ranging from 15 cents in Marksville District to 60 cents in Luray. No decision has been reached on the County Welfare Board's budget, but it will not require a separate levy since it will be included under the general county fund.

Capt. Moore, USS Quincy, To Be Buried

Graveside services for Capt. Samuel Nobre Moore, commanding officer of the cruiser Quincy, who was killed in the Solomons in 1942, will be held tomorrow at 3 p. m. in Arlington Cemetery. Rear Admiral W. N. Thomas, chief of Chaplain's Corps, will officiate at the reinterment.

Capt. Moore

A native of the District, Captain Moore lost his life in a night battle off Savo Island, where the Quincy was one of three cruisers screening the landing of supplies and reinforcements for Marine Corps forces that had landed two days earlier in the southeastern part of the Solomons.

Captain Moore was on convoy duty in World War I, after his graduation from the Naval Academy, and later served as commanding officer of five different ships from 1925 and 1932. He was in command of Destroyer Division 21, which removed refugees from Spain during the Spanish civil war.

In recognition of his service, the destroyer Samuel N. Moore was christened in his honor on February 23, 1944.

Captain Moore was first reported to be buried on Florida Island in the Solomons, but his grave was discovered on Sabo Island through a passage in the book, "Guadalcanal Diary," which referred to the "lonely grave of the captain of the Quincy." A native of the island was found later wearing his Naval Academy ring.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Camilla Chipman Moore, who lives at 3107 Circle Hill rd., Alexandria; two sisters, Miss Margaret M., and Miss Edith M. Moore, of 114 Grafton st., Chevy Chase; a stepdaughter, Mrs. Yvonne Griffith, and two grandchildren.

Maryland DAR Votes For Admission of DPs

Baltimore, March 10 (AP).—The Maryland State D.A.R. Society today in the final session of a two-day State conference passed five resolutions. The 143 delegates favored:

(1) Admission of displaced persons to this country; (2) The work of Representative Thomas (R., N. J.) "for the preservation of our American liberties"; (3) universal military training; (4) the Marshall Plan; and (5) more emphasis in Maryland schools on the study of American history and the Constitution.

'Bowl of Soup' Plea Nets Man 30 Days

Hagerstown, Md., March 10 (AP).—Lester Shrader, 48, wanted one too many bowls of soup.

Detective Clarence Carroll watched him from across the street for some time as Shrader stood at the door of a restaurant and accosted all who entered with his plea for "the price of a bowl of soup."

Carroll crossed over and Shrader put the touch on him, too. A magistrate today sentenced Shrader to 30 days on a vagrancy charge.

Md. Pollution Board May Tighten Rules

Annapolis, Md., March 10 (AP).—Proposals to set up tighter rules against polluting Maryland waters will be up for discussion Friday at a meeting of the Water Pollution Control Commission.

Paul W. McKee, executive secretary, said today he would propose three new regulations for the commission to study at its Baltimore meeting. He said the regulations would be aimed at specific violations which are not defined now.

Postmaster Injured

Hagerstown, Md., March 10 (AP).—Fifty stitches were required to close face and scalp wounds received by Donald Gardner, 38-year-old postmaster at the State sanitorium, when his car crashed into a pole early today. Gardner said he was blinded by the lights of an approaching car.

Dr. H. F. Bain Headed U. S. Mines Bureau

Dr. H. Foster Bain, who died Tuesday at Santo Tomas Hospital at Manila, at the age of 76, was director of the United States Bureau Mines from 1921 to 1925, and lived in Washington at various times from 1918 on.

Dr. Bain

A distinguished mining engineer and a member of several mining engineering societies, Dr. Bain was technical mining adviser to Philippines President Manuel Quezon in 1941 when he was captured by the Japanese and interned at Santo Tomas for two years.

He was on his second trip back to the Philippines since his internment.

Native of Indiana

A native of Seymour, Ind., he received a B. S. degree from Moore's Hill College, Ind., attended Johns Hopkins from 1891 to 1893, and received his Ph. D. from the University of Chicago in 1897.

Following several years as a geologist for the States of Iowa and Illinois and the United States Geological Survey, Dr. Bain became editor of a mining and scientific magazine in San Francisco and later editor of the Mining Magazine in London.

Among his later activities were explorations in the Far East, relief work in Belgium follow the World War, and mining consultant positions for Belgium, Argentina, China and Japan.

He first came to Washington in 1918 as assistant director of the Bureau of Mines, residing then and during later sojourns at the Cosmos Club and at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Margaret Bain Beaver, 1816 37th st. nw.

Body to be Cremated

Dr. Bain was a fellow of the Geological Society of America and a member of the Mining and Metallurgical Engineers, the Canadian Institute of Mining Engineers, the Engineers Club of New York, the Mining Engineers Clubs of New York and San Francisco and the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers, of which he was president from 1925 to 1931.

Of the many articles and books written by him, perhaps his best known was the book, "Ores and Industry in the Far East."

The body will be cremated and the ashes will be strewn over Manila Bay.

Besides his daughter, he leaves his widow, Mrs. Mary Wright Bain of Steamboat, Nev., and two grandchildren.

Military Costs Expected to Rise In Coming Years

America must spend more and more money in coming years to maintain even its present military strength, Budget Director James E. Webb declared yesterday.

These greater expenditures, he told a meeting of the Rotary Club at the Mayflower Hotel, will be needed because of the depletion of wartime materiel stocks and the fact that many wartime weapons are now obsolete.

"On the other hand," Webb said, "as progress toward unification of the armed forces in achieved, a more efficient utilization of funds will be possible."

About 300 attended the regular weekly luncheon meeting. George E. Muth presided.

Dr. Tucker to Dedicate Winchester Sacristy

Winchester, Va., March 10 (Spl.). A new sacristy at Christ Episcopal Church here will be dedicated at 11 a. m. Sunday by the Right Rev. Henry St. George Tucker, D. D., one-time Bishop of Virginia and former presiding bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church of America. A gift of Frank N. Hack, the sacristy is a memorial to the late Robert B. Real Police Take Hand In 'Cops and Robbers'

Towson, Md., March 10 (AP).—After a 70-mile-an-hour chase, police arrested two teen-aged boys today and accused them of having five rifles and a shotgun in their possesson.

The youths said they were only playing cops and robbers.

Police said Robert G. McComas, 19, and Richard Biedler, 18, stopped Cabbie Joseph A. Nacci, 19, and took his driving license.

They told Nacci they were cops. Nacci called the real cops, who fired six shots and chased the boys' car over an embankment before they were caught.

Mamye Peak, Writer, Dies In Upperville

Upperville, Va., March 10.—Miss Mayme Ober Peak, 65, dean of newspaperwomen in Hollywood and magazine writers, died here yesterday after a 2½-year illness.

Miss Peak, who covered Hollywood as a special staff writer for the Boston Globe for 20 years, was the first president of the Hollywood Women's Press Club.

A Washington correspondent during the 1920s, Miss Peak covered the White House and Capitol during the Harding and Coolidge administrations. She was a member of the National Press Club.

In Hollywood, she wrote special stories and columns for North American Newspaper Alliance and the Bell Syndicate. Her articles also appeared in the Ladies' Home Journal, Liberty, McCall's and Current History.

Miss Peak was born in Lynchburg, Va., the daughter of the late William Nesbitt and Nannie Hickok Peak.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at the home of her sister, Mrs. Frederick Gochnauer, here. Interment will be in Presbyterian Cemetery, Lynchburg.

Survivors, besides her sister, are two nieces, Miss Anna F. Gochnauer and Mrs. George R. Slater, both of Upperville.

Finding of Father Aids Woman's Plans to Marry

Norma Jeanette Dye, 22, attractive and in love, was reunited yesterday with her long-sought father, in Falmouth, a.

Her plans to wed a sailor whose parents wanted to meet hers depended on success of the search, she had told the Missing Persons Bureau here in asking aid.

Yesterday both Norma and her fiance, Robert Merriman, 21, U. S. Navy water tender, 3/c, found her dad, Alfred Dye, who had been living outside Falmouth for years as a sawmill operator, the Associated Press reported.

The Norfolk girl said she had been without a family since the age of 3, when she was made a ward of the District courts. She lived in Arlington, Va., and in Midwestern States before she became a telephone operator in Norfolk, and met Merriman.

Petition Asks Ruling Against Sanitary District

Opponents of the proposed sanitary district in northeast Fairfax County yesterday filed a petition in Fairfax Circuit Court asking creation of the district be denied.

The petition claimed:

1. Testimony at a hearing March 2 failed to show the area would be benefited by creation of the district.

2. Testimony at the hearing showed water and sewer lines could be provided only a "ruinous financial burden on the property."

3. Testimony did not show water and sewers could be financed for less than 18 per cent of the assessed value of taxable real estate in the area as required by law.

Judge Paul E. Brown turned down the district March 2 as requested in the petition but left the way open for agreement on a smaller area. Advocates of the district said they have presented him a new plan and expect a decision Friday.

Jefferson P. Cairnes, 11-year-old student at Bancroft School and a carrier for The Washington Post, has been nominated as the most courteous carrier boy because he is "especially prompt, dependable, and always polite."

His nomination comes from Mrs. William E. Safford, of 3339 Mount Pleasant st., who wrote that she was "ashamed that I do not know his name."

Mrs. Safford wrote that "no matter what variety of weather we are having, the paper is in front of my door, on the porch, by 6:30 o'clock. I feel quite guilty when I think of myself, warm and under shelter, and this youngster going his faithful rounds in the dark and cold. Hope he gets the bond!"

If you would like to nominate your carrier for the special award of a $50 Government bond being offered in the contest to find The Washington Post's most courteous carrier boy, fill out the coupon, adding a sentence or two on why you believe your carrier is courteous. He will be identified from your address.

Send or bring your entry to The Washington Post, Washington, 4, D. C. The contest closes March 17.

Temporary Schools Urged

Building costs are so high and school construction needs so urgent in Montgomery County that all future classrooms should be in temporary structures, County Commissioner Wesley I. Sauter said yesterday.

Sauter said he would suggest at the next meeting of the Board of Education that all school construction be made standard in design and built of frame, similar to temporary buildings erected by the Government during World War I. The temporary structures, he added, could later be improved by addition of brick veneer and various types of ornamentation.

A program of structures such as these, Sauter declared, would enable the county to house its school population "without the necessity of doubling up or going on a two-shift basis."

Sauter expressed the belief that temporary structures, limited to one floor in height, would be "perfectly safe" as far as fire hazards are concerned because "any window or door opening would be a means of exit."

His suggestion came as school officials, already in the midst of a two-million-dollar construction program, were considering an additional two-million-dollar bond issue for new classrooms in 1949.

A recent report on school construction placed the present school population at 18,500, but estimated it might go as high as 23,500 by next year. Building currently under way will provide 74 new classrooms, to make way for about 2590 additional pupils.

Informed of Sauter's proposal, School Superintendent Edwin W. Broome said he would reserve comment pending a study of the idea.

Nathan R. Gilbert, president of the county council of Parent-Teacher Associations, supported the proposal in part.

"Since the choice is between a few permanent buildings with double shifts and the type of construction proposed by Mr. Sauter," Gilbert said, "I'm in favor of it for the time being at least."

Women Leading Men In Longevity Race

New York, March 10 (AP).—American males are living longer than they used to but they still aren't doing as well as the women, the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. says.

In 1900, the average white male infant had 40 chances in 100 of reaching age 65. Now, the company reports, his chances are 50 in 100.

UNITED AIR LINES

DC-6 SERVICE

United Air Lines is pleased to announce the resumption of scheduled service with its Douglas DC-6 aircraft beginning March 21, following completion of modifications.

Last November the airlines voluntarily withdrew the DC-6s from service when difficulty involving fire developed after 18,000,000 miles of DC-6 flying. Here is the story of what has taken place since then.

A board of aircraft experts, carefully selected from the airlines, the Douglas Aircraft Company, the Civil Aeronautics Administration and the Civil Aeronautics Board, was established to determine the source of difficulty and to take the necessary steps to eliminate it. In addition to skilled engineers, veteran DC-6 pilots participated in that assignment.

After weeks of exhaustive engineering inspections and flight tests, during which every detail of the aircraft was thoroughly checked and rechecked, the source of difficulty was located. Under certain unusual circumstances, fuel could enter the air intake of a cabin heater, resulting in combustion. Necessary engineering changes were then made to prevent any recurrence. Also the engineers and pilots recommended additional modifications which have been incorporated in the DC-6. These changes, including an improvement of the cabin pressurizing system, have been approved by the Civil Aeronautics Administration of the government.

Since then the modified DC-6 has successfully undergone intensive flight tests conducted by the government, factory and airline engineers and pilots, confirming the improved mechanical efficiency of the airplane.

Civil Aeronautics Administrator T. P. Wright makes this statement in a letter to the Douglas Aircraft Company dated Feb. 20, 1948, "I believe that the DC-6 today, from an engineering viewpoint, represents one of the safest, finest and most advanced airline transports available for public service."

Fulfilling our pledge given to you at the time of voluntary withdrawal of the DC-6, we report these facts because we consider the confidence of the public our most valuable asset. We never have, and never will, operate any airplane that does not measure up to the highest known standards of safety and dependability.

We are proud to see the DC-6, designated by United Air Lines as the Mainliner 300, come back to the Main Line Airway. We are convinced that it will, in every way, prove itself to be the outstanding airliner in operation anywhere in the world.

W. A. Patterson

Eccles' Demotion Aired at Hearing

Clayton Reveals Snyder Discussed McCabe Appointment to Reserve Post

The mystery surrounding the sudden demotion of Marriner S. Eccles as Federal Reserve Board chairman, and the naming of Thomas B. McCabe, Philadelphia paper manufacturer, as his successor, that stirred Washington a month ago, deepened yesterday.

Former Undersecretary of State William L. Clayton yesterday reluctantly revealed to the Senate Banking Committee that McCabe's appointment had been discussed with him in January by Treasury Secretary John W. Snyder.

At the time of Eccles' demotion to assistant chairman to make way for McCabe, Snyder had vigorously denied to newsmen reports that he had "pulled the rug out from under" Eccles.

Snyder Acknowledges Remarks

Yesterday Snyder, after being told of Clayton's statement, issued a release acknowledging Clayton's remarks to be true. He admitted that he had discussed McCabe's qualifications for a place on the Reserve Bank Board.

But Snyder emphatically declared that at that time he was thinking only of McCabe's appointment to the seven-man board. He insisted that the question of making McCabe board chairman in place of Eccle did not arise. That, he added, was something only the President could decide.

Clayton appeared yesterday as a character witness for McCabe before the committee which must recommend to the Senate whether McCabe should be confirmed for the reserve board post. Clayton took the stand after McCabe, in a long statement, had defended his record as foreign liquidation commissioner for the State Department.

Last week McCabe was accused by Chairman Charles W. Tobey (R., N. H.) of the committee, of having made some "poor bargains" for the United States in that position. The Foreign Liquidation Commission had charge of disposing of surplus war property in foreign countries.

Clayton Defends McCabe

Clayton had been McCabe's superior in the earlier job. He told the committee that McCabe conducted himself with "intelligence, patience and industry." He said that McCabe, in his opinion, "would certainly be competent" for the reserve board job.

In fact, Clayton added, "they" had asked him in advance about the McCabe appointment.

"They!" Tobey shouted. "Who is they? Who asked you?"

"Do I have to tell?" pleaded Clayton.

"The Secretary of the Treasury," Clayton remarked.

McCabe Answers Criticisms

McCabe, who, in addition to being president of the Scott Paper Co. of Chester, Pa., is president of the Philadelphia Reserve Bank, took occasion yesterday to explain criticism over the operations of the liquidation agency in China.

A week ago Tobey had charged that 11 medium bombers (B-25s) had been illegally sold to the Chinese Nationalist government. When word of the deal leaked out, Tobey said, McCabe had ordered the tails of the planes chopped off.

"Although this has been made to appear as wanton destruction of Government property," McCabe stated, "this interpretation is wholly unwarranted and based upon a complete misunderstanding."

Sale Made by Johnson

The sale, he said, had been made by his deputy, Brig. Gen. B. A. Johnson, on condition that the planes be dismantled and used only for their parts.

The Army, he explained, had failed to demilitarize them.

McCabe denied allegations he had refused to investigate charges of irregularities by Johnson. He said that he visited the Shanghai office, found Johnson tired out, and decided to replace him. Johnson is now a colonel in Tokyo.

McCabe also answered charges by Tobey that American blood plasma was sold as surplus, and later found its way into the Chinese black market.

The plasma, he said, had been classified by the Navy as "miscellaneous medical supplies." Most of it was recovered later, he said.

4th Red Cross Report Ready

Support of local business concerns in the 1948 Red Cross campaign for $1,080,000 will be highlighted at the fourth report luncheon of the drive tomorrow.

H. Randolph Maddox, chairman of the genetral business unit and vice chairman of the over-all campaign, expressed the hope "substantial returns" will be reported from the 1500 larger firms reached through his unit.

Jennings Randolph, former Congressman from West Virginia and now assistant to the President of Capital Airlines, will be principal speaker at the luncheon—set for 12:30 p. m. in the Chamber of Commerce Bldg.

All divisions, including suburban units, are expected to make reports of progress to date. Results tabulated so far placed the intake at $319,309, or 29.57 per cent of the goal.

The U. S. Marine Corps has reported 151.4 per cent of its $2255 quota, which was described by Treasury Secretary John W. Snyder as a "pace setter" for other Government units.

"This is the kind of performance we hope for in all our divisions," Snyder, who heads the Government Unit in the campaign, commented.

Milk Case Comes Up March 19

Defendants indicted for conspiracy to fix milk prices and restrain dairy trade here will be directed to appear in District Court for arraignment on March 19, it was learned yesterday.

The Justice Department will recommend to the court that the defendants not be permitted to enter pleas of nolo contendere (I do not contend), said John F. Baecher, first assistant in the department's Antitrust Division.

Baecher said this view was set out by Attorney General Tom C. Clark last fall when he announced the department's intention to investigate high prices of food, clothing and housing.

Named in the Federal grand jury milk indictments were the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association and its secretary-treasurer, Bruce B. Derrick; Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase Dairy, Thompson's Dairy, Richfield Dairy, Wakefield Dairy, Safeway Stores, which operates its own dairy; Lucerne Milk Co., Alexandria Dairy and Harvey Dairy.

Most of the dairies named in the indictment have since denied efforts to fix prices and restrain trade as charged under the Sherman Antitrust Act.

Elwood H. Seal, counsel for the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association and a former corporation counsel here, said yesterday that neither the association nor Derrick will have any comment until actual court proceedings start.

—With Shirley Povich

ORLANDO, FLA., March 10.—The All-America Football Conference has the miseries again with the Baltimore franchise now slightly defunct and back in the lap of the league. And those chuckles you hear are traceable to the National Football League people whose reaction is very human. After all, the AAC is a competitor and threatening to get a little bit too lusty.

POVICH

Bob Rodenberg's two biggest partners pulled out of the Baltimore venture a couple of months ago and it was known then that his financial set-up as president of the Colts was shaky. Maury Nee and Karl Corby took $35,000 each in losses after a one-season fling at pro football in Baltimore and picked up their marbles. Rodenberg was less easily scared and tried to hold the club together until the other day when he, too, surrendered.

At this point, the conference isn't looking good. Baltimore was a replacement for Miami, which, in 1946, proved a dud. In Brooklyn, the conference virtually gave the franchise to Branch Rickey for nothing after Bill Cox and his backers lost $350,000 in two years. It was a nice swap for the conference, though. Rickey's presence gives it some stability.

NOW COX is attempting to move into Baltimore, but there is some doubt if the conference will embrace him eagerly. He is, after all, the man who was banished from big league baseball by Judge Landis on charges of betting on games while he was president of the Phillies, and he was not a confidence-inspiring figure in the football league. And at Brooklyn he did not show any promotional genius.

The conference is in no mood to give up quickly on Baltimore, though. There has been no proof yet that Baltimore isn't a good football town and there is evidence that it could be a whale of an asset to the conference with the proper ownership and promotion. The Rodenberg crowd's losses of $166,000 in 1947 are not quite staggering in the light of some of the circumstances.

Bob Rodenberg, a nice guy, was a green pea in the football business and the mistakes he made were whoppers. He was too prodigal with the club's money for players whose talent was suspect, and his entertainment expenses were huge. He chartered planes for his club's travels with all the lavishness of a millionaire, less than six months before he had to come up with new scratch.

THE BALTIMORE townsfolk gave the last-place Colts amazing support until they were so hopelessly out of it interest collapsed. If the club had won merely as many as three games, the financial losses could have been halved. Baltimore was all ready to take the team to its heart as Washington did the Redskins, but the interest cooled naturally enough when the team lost something like eight in a row.

Just before Rodenberg quit, one of his acts was to give Business Manager Jack Espey his release. That didn't quite add up, inasmuch as Espey is a shrewd operator and recognized as a high factor in the success of the Redskins. Espey had Baltimore hopped up about the Colts early in the season with his promotional stunts, and if Rodenberg had been able to produce a team worthy of them, the pair would have been riding high.

The All-America Conference officials could do worse than turn the franchise over to Espey and let him operate it, even if they had to loan him the funds with which to get a start. It is pretty well known that the National Football League is eyeing Baltimore covetously. They'd like to move the Green Bay franchise there, if the AAC pulls out of the town.

GREEN BAY is too small now for big league football with its tremendous payrolls and expense nut. The All-America would be playing into the hands of its rival league if it quits on Baltimore. If Baltimore business men are interested, the AAC ought to make a special inducement for them to take over the franchise, even if they give it away as they did in Brooklyn.

There's a lot of money in the conference despite the defection of Miami and Brooklyn and Baltimore. The league's big backer is Ben Lindheimer, the Chicago racing magnate who owns the Los Angeles Dons despite the fact that Don Ameche is president of that club. Such as Lindheimer and Dan Topping and Del Webb, who own the Yankees of the AAC, doubtless will unbundle some of their cash to save their own investments.

It is no secret that the NFL in an attempt to smash the All-America has been trying to lure Mickey McBride, owner of the rich and thriving Cleveland Browns, into their circuit, but they haven't had any success. McBride, a self-made millionaire who doesn't know how to circumlocute, says, "I'm in the All-America Conference to stay. Never in my life did I ever quit on anybody who was in trouble."

Caps' Hopes Fade; Stags Win, 71-54

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

The Washington Capitols lost their sixth straight basketball Association of America game last night, a 71-54 decision to the Chicago Stags, Western Division leaders.

The loss, witnessed by 2813 spectators, dropped the Caps one and one-half games behind the third-place Baltimore Bullets and virtually removed them from the playoffs, starting March 21.

Max Zaslofsky, the league's leading scorer, bucketed eight field goals and 12 free throws for 28 points, high man for the night.

Washington led only once, early in the first quarter. After that it was Chicago all the way.

Caps Trail, 37-30, at Half

In spite of Max Zaslofsky, who netted eight of the Stags' first 12 points, the Caps managed to stay within reach of the Chicagoans until late in the first period.

At that stage, Stan Miasek and Gene Vance connected to pull the Stags 6 points in front, but Bones McKinney got 3 of the points back and Washington trailed by only 3, 17-14, at the quarter.

The Cap cause suffered a bad break in that period when Freddie Scolari ran up four personal fouls and had to be withdrawn shortly before the period ended.

Only Bob Feerick and McKinney seemed to be playing with their usual ability for Washington in the second period and while the other Caps were listless, the Stags went to town.

Miasek, who got three straight buckets, and Zaslofsky, who owned 14 points by recess time,, led the attack which put the Stags in front, 37-30 by halftime.

Zaslofsky Spurts Again

With Irv Torgoff leading a mild uprising, Washington pulled up to within three points, 46-43, late in the third quarter. Once again, however, the irrepressible Zaslofsky reentered the scene with two fast set shots and Chicago led, 50-43, as the last quarter began.

The Caps were playing without McKinney and Scolari at this stage as both had made five fouls and were being saved for a hopeful last spurt.

Mt. Rainier, B-CC Triumph

Bethesda-Chevy Chase, Mount Rainier and Damascus won their District II class basketball championships in the Maryland State high tournament playoffs before 2000 fans last night at Ritchie Coliseum.

B-CC won the Class A title by defeating Maryland Park, 56-47. Mount Rainier rallied to beat Lackey, 35-34, for the Class C crown. Winning point was a foul shot in overtime by the Mounts' Bob Jones. And Damascus won the D championship with a 42-22 win over Great Mills.

Jockey Roberts Returns, Search For Snider Futile

Miami, Fla., March 10 (U.P.).—Jockey Porter Roberts sadly returned to his riding chores at Tropical Park today after vainly searching in his private plane for his missing friend, Jockey Al Snider.

Roberts continued to comb the Atlantic Oceans and the Gulf of Mexico after the Coast Guard had abandoned its official search for Snider and two fishing companions missing since a storm last Friday. But this afternoon Roberts, who had canceled all his mounts at the track, returned to the saddle.

Roberts and Snider's wife, Mrs. Dorothy Snider, refused to believe that the jockey who rode Citation to victory in the Flamingo Stakes was truly lost.

W. Kentucky And St. Louis NIT Choices

New York, March 10 (A.P.).—Western Kentucky's veteran five today was rated a solid choice over LaSalle and St. Louis' Billikins were made slim favorites over Bowling Green for tomorrow's National Invitation Basketball tourney openers.

A sellout crowd of over 18,000 is expected to pack Madison Square Garden for the curtain-raiser although some 3000 tickets still were unsold on the eve of the doubleheader.

The second set of quarter-finals will be held Saturday when Texas (20-4) faces New York U. (20-0) and North Carolina State (29-2) opposes Depaul (21-6). The semi-finals are listed for Monday and the finals for Wednesday, March 17.

Top-seeded Western Kentucky (26-1) is making its third appearance in the N. I. T. and Coach Ed Diddle is bringing in a tall, experienced quintet.

This will be LaSalle's (19-3) first start in the invitation. Young Charley McGlone, the Explorer's coach, is counting heavily on Larry Foust, his 6-9 center, to upset the experts' dope bucket. LaSalle is the tourney's underdog at 20 to 1.

The LaSalle-Western Kentucky tilt is scheduled to start at 8 p.m. (EST). The St. Louis-Bowling Green contest is programmed for 9:45 p.m.

St. Louis (21-3), seeded fourth behind Western Kentucky, NYU, and N. C. State, is paced by big Ed MacAuley, a 6-8 All-America center. He dropped in 315 points in 24 games and has been a constant nuisance to the opposition with his feeding from the bucket.

Bowling Green (27-5) is making its fourth trip to the invitation while this is St. Louis' first. The Ohio Falcons have the tallest starting five in the tourney with Charles Share, 6-10, Mac Otten, 6-6, Stan Weber, 6-5½, John Payak, 6-4, and Leo Kubiak, 5-11.

Tomorrow's victors will meet in the semi-finals Monday which will also match Saturday night's survivors.

Hoyas Defeat B. C., 65-46

New York, March 10 (A.P.).—Kenny Brown led his Georgetown mates to a decisive 65-46 triumph tonight over Boston College in the first game of a charity twin bill at the Sixty-ninth Regiment Armory before some 3000 fans.

Taking an early lead, which they never relinquished, the Hoyas held a 30-25 half-time advantage.

The lads from Washington started the second half with a 13-point rally, which was broken only by a single field goal for the Boston contingent by Mort Stagoff.

The BC team rallied late in the game to draw up to 49-43 with almost five minutes to play but again their rivals put on the heat to win going away. Eight straight points put Georgetown well out in front as the best Boston could do during the remaining time was to toss in three one-pointers.

Brown was the big gun with 20 tallies while Stagoff paced the losers with five baskets good for 10 points.

Manhattan, Beloit Win in NAIB Tourney

Kansas City, March 10 (A.P.).—Beloit College today became a top favorite in the National Association of Intercollegiate Basketball tournament by knocking off Lawrence Tech of Detroit, and Manhattan of New York and Xavier of Cincinnati also won impressive victories in second-round games.

The Wisconsin cagers, sporting a 22-2 pretournament record and a scoring mark of 68.3 points per game, put Tech out of the tournament 78-62. Even the 26-point spree of Norm Hankins, the national major college scoring leader, couldn't save Tech from defeat. Xavier followed with a 57-35 rout of Connecticut Teachers of New Britain and Manhattan sent Southern Illinois of Carbondale, the 1946 NAIB champions, to the sidelines, 52-42.

John Byrnes and Mike Joyce, Manhattan's two tall sharpshooters, controlled rebounds so well that only a game-end spurt saved Southern Illinois from a multipoint lacing.

Manhattan led, 26-14, at the half and spurted to 48-26 with four minutes of the second period gone. The New Yorkers, playing deliberately and smoothly, kept a wide margin until Southern Illinois put on burst in the last three minutes.

Byrnes and Joyce each hit 13 points for Manhattan and Charles Goss, Southern Illinois center, dropped in 10.

Beloit, Xavier Win In NAIB 2d Round

Kansas City, March 10 (A.P.).—Beloit College defeated Lawrence Tech, 78 to 62 today in the opening second round game of the National Intercollegiate Basket ball Tournament.

Xavier of Cincinnati then bounced Connecticut Teachers of New Britain out of the tournament with a 57 to 35 victory.

The Cincinnati team was leading, 15 to 13, early in the game when the contest was interrupted for 40 minutes by a city-wide light and power failure. The Ohioans finished the half with a 34 to 17 lead.

In a third afternoon contest, Manhattan College of New York defeated Southern Illinois, 52-42.

Arnold Likes To Get Bouts Over in Hurry

The kind of boxer who loves the pastime—even in practice—will be holding down the local 130-pound assignment Saturday when Catholic University plays host to John Carroll University in an 8:30 match at Brookland gym.

He's curly-haired Johnny Arnold, winner of his last three bouts by knockouts and victor in four out of nine collegiate fights since, as a school newspaper reporter, he observed the Cardinal boxing team and decided he could beat any of the candidates at his weight.

Arnold, former Gonzaga High student, has been watched carefully by Coach Eddie LaFond for fear he'll overtrain.

One of his faults is, when told to box four rounds in the gym, he'll go 8 or 9 rounds. But after his last knockout, over Bucknell's Jim Wyant in :56 of the third round, Arnold made the classic remark:

"Gee, coach, I'm sorry I took so long!"

Indoor Tennis Will Open Today

New York, March 10 (A.P.).—Three top-seeded Americans are scheduled to play tomorrow as the National Indoor Tennis Championships get under way on the polished boards of the Seventh Regiment Armory.

Billy Talbert of New York, this country's best bet to keep a star-studded foreign contingent from grabbing the title vacated by Jack Kramer, opens his bid against Fred Krais of Pelham Manor, N. Y.

Second-seeded Irvin Dorfman of New York plays Jim Gates of Great Neck, N. Y., while third-seeded Ed McGrath, Eastern indoor champion from Brooklyn, meets another New Yorker, Ed Jacobs.

Such high-ranking foreign stars as Marcel Bernard and Jean Borotra of France, Armando Vieira of Brazil and Vinicius Rurac of Romania are not scheduled to play their opening matches until Friday.

Also among the players who take the floor tomorrow will be Dr. Reginald S. Weir of New York, first Negro ever to appear in a national net tourney.

3 C. U. Boxers In Nationals

Three Catholic University boxers who will make their final home appearance of the season Saturday, have been nominated for the National Intercollegiate tournament at Wisconsin the latter part of this month.

Coach Eddie LaFond yesterday forwarded the applications of John Arnold, 130; Tom Cronin, 125, and Cal Nisson, 145.

If C. U. defeats John Carroll this week it will maintain LaFond's record of never having a losing season.

CYO Quarterfinals Set Tonight at C. U.

Quarterfinals of the Catholic Youth Organization's intermediate basketball league take place tonight at the Catholic U. gym. Date and place of the semifinals will be set later.

Quarterfinal pairings are St. Dominic's vs. Nativity, 6 p. m., St. Teresa's vs. St. Bernadettes, 7 p. m., and St. Joseph's vs. Blessed Sacrament, 8 p. m.

Court Tourney Set

Winchester, Va., March 10.—The FFA Federation basketball tournament will be held here March 19, with teams from Winchester, Boyce, Luray and Washington, Va., competing for the title now held by the Handley Chapter of this city.

Yanks Beat Cards, 2-0, With 2 Hits

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 10 (A.P.).—The New York Yankees collected only two hits today in blanking the St. Louis Cardinals, 2-0, before 5589 in the opener of their annual spring exhibition series.

Vic Raschi, Randy Gumpert and Karl Drews held the Red Birds to four hits to assure the champs of their second straight victory.

Although the Yanks did not get a hit until the seventh, they nicked Al Brazle for a run in the first. A walk to George Stirnweiss, followed by a fielder's choice, sacrifice and infield out added up to a score.

After Jim Hearn walked Billy Johnson in the seventh, Phil Rizzuto came through with a double, the first Yank hit, to add the second run. The other blow was a single by Tom Henrich in the eighth off Ken Johnson.

Texan's Rap Carries Over 385 Feet

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Orlando, Fla. March 10.—Rookie Outfielder Larry Drake rapped loudly for attention in the Washington camp today by rapping a home run over the right field wall to give the Rookie a 2-2 tie with the regulars today in the first intra-squad exhibition game.

It was a six-inning affair in which Coach Rick Ferrell's rookies were laboring unde ra 2-0 deficit when the stream-lined outfielder from Texas walloped one of Vernon Curtis' pitches 385 feet over the right field wall. He scored Mark Christman who had previously singled.

Coach Clyde Milan's regulars scored their two runs off Sid Hudson, who took a two-inning turn for the rookies, but they were the gift of Second Baseman Eddie Lyons. Lyons booted a double-play grounder by Robertson in the second inning after Tom McBride had singled, and a bit later Al Evans scored both runs with a single to left.

Kozar Whacks Single

Chic Pieretti and Rookie Southpaw Joe Murray held the rookies to three hits after succeeding Hudson in the last four innings. Milo Candini and Rookie Lefthander Early Davis each pitched a pair of scoreless innings for the regulars.

Rookie Second Baseman Al Kozar lost no time in impressing the bosses with the reality of his .339 average at New Orleans last year. In his first turn at bat, he walloped a vicious single into right field on the first pitch Hudson threw him.

Difani made one hit in three times at bat but he banged the longest ball of the day, even including Drake's homer. It was a massive fly to left center that Gil Coan hauled down.

Okrie Impressive

Manager Joe Kuhel liked the actions of Len Okrie behind the bat, he said . . . Dean Stafford, out of the same Texas League as Drake, distinguished himself with a fiery single in three times at bat . . . Mickey Vernon made one hit in three appearances, but Owner Clark Griffith complained he was not swinging well . . . There was no wind at the time Drake blasted his homer over the right field wall and it was a prodigious poke that cleared the barrier . . . Kuhel is taking his whole squad of nearly 40 players to West Palm Beach tomorrow for the three exhibition games with the Athletics . . . He will pitch his two tall rookie right handers, Dick Weik and Joe Jones against the A's in the opener . . . Pieretti was pitching his new-found slider today and the hitters were vowing that it broke six inches to the outside.

America's 2 Olympic Champs Arrive, Call Selves 'Lucky'

New York, March 10 (A.P.).—The only two United States individual winter Olympics champions came home in triumphs today.

"Lucky," said Gretchen Fraser of Vancouver, Wash., America's first and only ski champion, in summing up for herself and Dick Button of Englewood, N. J., the figure skating king.

Both won championships never before won by Americans.

Dick indicated his willingness to listen to professional offers—but gave promoters little hope he would accept any.

Mrs. Fraser reaffirmed a decision made in Oslo that she was through with active competition.

"I'm happily married," said the pretty 29-year-old housewife. "You can't be that and go on skiing. So I'm quitting."

Dempsey Should Know

Boston, March 10 (U.P.).—Jack Dempsey, former world's heavyweight boxing champion, said today he was in favor of legislation under which a boxer who had been knocked out could not fight in another bout for 60 days.

W&L Scares 'Em Off

Lexington, Va., March 10 (A.P.).—Washington and Lee University athletic officials were peeved today by an announcement by rival Southern Conference wrestling coaches that they will boycott the General's wrestling team next season.

Al Crawford, N. C. State Coach advised Washington and Lee Coach Harry Broadbent at the annual Conference mat tournament, which the Generals walked away with, that he and other loop mentors would not take on the Generals in dual meets next year.

Mexican League Jumper

Mexico City, March 10 (A.P.).—Roberto Avila, the Mexican League's top hitter and star second baseman, said he will enplane tonight to Los Angeles, Calif., to appear with the Cleveland Indians Sunday in an exhibition against the New York Giants. Mexican newspapers have reported Avila signed a contract with the Indians. There has been no confirmation.

It's Still Wyoming

Chicago, March 10 (U.P.).—Kenneth L. (Tug) Wilson, secretary-treasurer for the National Collegiate Association, today refused to take any action on Utah University's protest of the selection of Wyoming for the basketball tournament.

Wilson, who received a copy of Utah's protest concerning the District Seven berth, indicated that the selection of Wyoming by the district committee was the final word.

Two 'Little Men' Make All-America Five

New York, March 10 (A.P.).—Contrary to the impression in some circles, good "little guys" aren't overlooked in present-day college basketball.

Two of them—one 5 feet 10 inches, the other 5 feet 9—made the 1948 Associated Press All-America cage team, announced today, along with a "medium" 6 foot 1 inch and two stretching 6-8 and 6-9.

The "little guys," regarded as among the most difficult men to guard, are Ralph Beard, 5-10, Kentucky junior, and Murray Wier, 5-9, Iowa senior. Kevin "Comet" O'Shea, Notre Dame sophomore, is the "medium" 6-1. Ed MacCauley, 6-8, St. Louis junior, and Jim McIntyre, 6-9, Minnesota junior, are the type of tall men honored.

Beard dominated the balloting from 321 sports editors and writers in 40 States and the District of Columbia whose votes determined the team on a point basis.

Cutting across sectional lines, Beard received 859 points on 153 first-team votes and 47 seconds. Five points were awarded for a first-team vote, two for second. Thus the 20-year-old Beard, whose conference title had an NCAA tourney bid, polled better than 53 per cent of a possible perfect total.

The voting, in which coaches did not participate, produced a second team of Tony Lavelli, Yale; Alex Groza, Kentucky; Dwight Eddleman, Illinois; Arnold Ferrin, Utah; and George Kaftan of Holy Cross, defending NCAA champions.

A. L. "Amby" Bennett of the Oklahoma Aggies, Missouri Valley Conference champs; Dick Dickey of North Carolina State, Southern Conference champs; Don Forman, New York University; George Kok, Arkansas, and Bob Cousy, Holy Cross, made up a third team.

Altogether 239 players received votes. A fourth team was made up of Adolph Schayes, New York University; Ed Mikan, DePaul; Ernie Vandeweghe, Colgate; Jackie Robinson of Baylor, Southwest Conference champs, and Walt Budko of Columbia, Eastern Intercollegiate (Ivy) League winners. Sixty-one players were given honorable mention.

D. C. Horse in Grand National

London, March 10 (AP).—The American horse, Caddie II, and 45 other entries were accepted today for the Grand National Steeplechase. The race will be run March 20 at Aintree.

The number was far less than expected for the 4½-mile contest. Fifty seven started last year. The record field was 66 in 1929.

Caddie II, sent here by Washington financier Paul Mellon, was assigned one of the top loads because of his excellent record at home.

Here Caddie's best performance has been a second. Housewarmer, a National runner, beat him by a length two days ago. However, one racing expert wrote that "both jumped splendidly." Odds are 50 to 1 against Caddie repeating the 1938 victory of Battleship, the last United States winner.

Owners paid $400 to qualify their jumpers. First place is worth $36,131.

Runners, riders and trainers will welcome the smaller field. The fewer the horses the better chance the good jumpers have of soaring over the 30 obstacles without getting knocked down by an inferior entry.

Alice Deal Varsity defeated the Alumni, 26-24, yesterday at the Deal Junior High. Dick Harris led the Varsity with 10 points. Bob Hall's 17 topped the Alumni.

G. W., Fenlon Talk, But Not For Reporters

JOHNNY FENLON

George Washington University lost little time starting its search for a successor to Skip Stahley, football coach who resigned to take the backfield post at the University of Washington.

Johnny Fenlon, former GW football ace who coached Richmond three seasons, was closeted with Athletic Director Max Farrington yesterday for several hours and was interviewed by the athletic council.

After the lengthy discussion, Farrington reiterated his statement that no definite announcement could be made for some time.

"Naturally, we're anxious to sign a coach as soon as possible," he said, "but, we're not going to make any hasty selection. We want to pick a man we'll have for a long time."

Farrington indicated that other candidates would be interviewed before GW makes a choice. "We have had more than 30 apply already and you'd be surprised at some of their names," he informed.

Fenlon, currently athletic director at James Monroe High, Fredericksburg, Va., pleasantly had "no comment" to make.

Terps Boast Strengthened Mound Corps

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

The Nats may have been "experted" out of all hope for American League glory, but you can't convince Washington's colleges that their 1948 baseball forces won't set the diamond world afire.

Right now, considering the slush on most practice fields, setting anything afire is difficult but the six local and nearby squads, switching from indoors to outdoors as the weather permits, await the opening of action in two weeks with high anticipation.

Georgetown, once more, figures to be the strongest. Winners of 17 games while losing only 5 last season, the Hoyas under Coach Joe Judge have lost only one regular from '47 and joyfully boast 18 holdovers.

Pete Baker, first baseman of the trio which rang up 30 double plays in 22 games last year, is gone but Shortstop Al Naples and Second Baseman Joe Connors are back and have looked as good as ever in drills which started 10 days ago.

Ready to face one of the toughest schedules ever attempted by the Hoyas are their three prize right-handers—Bob Gorra, Billy Carroll and Tommy Flynn—each whom finished with a better than .750 record.

If for no other reason, Maryland's candidates under Coach Burton Shipley earn distinction as the club with the heaviest schedule. Thirty-one games are planned, the fast pace explained by the fact the Terps will have no freshman or junior varsity squads and more games will be necessary to get everybody on the oversized varsity group into action.

Terps Can Slug

Although the Terps won only 10 games while losing 11 last season, finishing fifth in the Southern Conference with a 4-3 record, they can be expected to improve in '48. Four outstanding pitchers have returned and in the slugging department, led by such as Joe Andrus, Maryland thinks it can hold its own.

Bobby Keene, an alternate pitcher and first baseman last season, will be confined to mound duty this year, and Joe Fitzpatrick, Bill Zupnik and Boots Banella round out an excellent starting quartet.

George Washington goes into the new season with a new coach, Otts Zahn, and enough old players to brighten prospects considerably. Lost from last year's outfit are Pitcher Jack Wheatley and Shortstop Charlie Heinbaugh, both now playing minor league ball, but experienced hands liberally sprinkle the group of 60 candidates now working out at the National Guard Armory.

Outstanding are Pitchers Curley Kuldell and Pete King, Catchers Don Druckenmiller and Joe Wapinsky, Outfielder Bunny Citrenbaum, and Third Baseman Joe Famulatte. Newcomers who have sparkled to date are Pitchers Pete Cordelli and Gene Gould.

American University, Catholic University and Gallaudet again compete in Mason-Dixon Conference play, Gallaudet with its second team since the 20's. Only eight games have been arranged for the Blues, who managed to win but two of 10 games in their return to baseball last year.

Strictly local action this season will be featured by home-and-home competition between Georgetown and G. W., the first game on April 27 and the second on May 7. The Hoyas also meet American, Maryland and Catholic twice. George Washington has two games with Maryland and Gallaudet has two dates with Catholic.

Complete Schedule:

It's a Promise!

Laurel Trot Racing Will Start June 21

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

IF IT DOESN'T RAIN, there will be harness racing the night of June 21 on the Laurel Raceway—mutuel betting and all the trimmings.

This was the promise yesterday of Richard H. Hutchinson, jr., president and general manager of the Laurel Harness Racing Association.

Haight

Young Hutchinson's declaration came a few hours after receiving the "Go Signal" from Uncle Sam on construction, through the issuance of a permit by James T. Martin, who has to do with amusement building and its relation to scarce material, in the Office of the Housing Expeditor.

Hutchinson received the good news less than 24 hours after the Maryland Racing Commission, sympathetic, but faced with reality, was about to delay all trotting racing in the State until 1948. The Oxon Hill and Ocean City tracks appeared ready to give up for this season.

Contracts were signed yesterday for construction work on the $400,000 plant located a mile north of Laurel on Route 1. Plans call for a prefabricated steel stand seating 3500 with a ramp, 100 by 300 feet, graduated to give another 5000 customers a look-see at racing.

For Richard H. Hutchinson, sr., a Washington furniture merchant and his son, former V.M.I. polo star and well-known as a horse trainer, the Laurel trotting track represents dreams come true.

When the old Comdr. J. K. L. Ross estate, a vast horse breeding and training center, was put on the block in 937, it was believed, naturally, that the Vanderbilts, Whitneys or one of the turf's first families would make the high bid.

Instead, the comparatively unknown (to flat racing circles) elder Hutchinson stepped in with a bid of $79,800 that stopped the last nod from wealthy horsemen made by Tony Pelleteri, New Orleans owner.

Observers shook their heads and wondered what a furniture man was going to do with such a pretentious horse farm and a mile training track.

"My father had only one thought, far in the future, as it was," said young Hutchison yesterday. "He pictured a harness track on the site. And it looks mighty like he's going to have it."

AS THE TALL, square-shouldered fellow illustrated on scrap paper some of the plans, I learned the following facts about Laurel Raceway.

Eight races nightly . . . daily double on the first and second . . . . first race at about 8 p. m., so everybody can get home by midnight . . . a totalizator, as used on big running tracks, will be installed . . . mutuel department to have 42 sellers and 42 cashiers . . . undecided about putting in a $50 window . . . $100,000 average total betting each nightly would allow track to get by . . . aim is for from $200,000 to $250,000 . . . programs will be combined with past performances (last eight races on each horse) . . . due to nocturnal racing, track will be half mile . . . no racing on muddy or sloppy tracks so commission allowed five "rain check" dates . . . meeting runs 20 nights until July 19.

Conflicts with only four local night games of the Nats who make a complete Western Swing while Laurel Raceway operates runs along with parts of Charles Town, Delaware Park and Havre de Grace meetings . . . all construction within law—Oxon Hill and Ocean City likely to use same system . . . track is 100 feet wide, enough for 10-horse fields, but first-year limit will be eight to a race . . . Undecided on starting gate but most probable one is auto type . . . track has been assured by harness officials that upwards of 300 horses will be available for entries for the opening program . . . negotiations are underway for special trains from Washington and Baltimore . . . there's a railroad siding already into the grounds.

I've been told the lighting system to be installed will be "better than daylight," devoid of all shadows—a necessity in night racing.

If illumination should fail, I'll wager the same amount of light could be attained by placing the two Happy Hutchinsons, junior and senior, at opposite ends of the infield. That is, if the gleam in junior's eyes yesterday was a sample.

At Priory Gym

Small Schools Open Unique Tournament

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Priory High School is presenting something different in the way of a post-season basketball tournament starting Friday.

It's differences are:

1. The seven participating schools aren't aiming at any special championship. Five of the teams have losing records.

2. Sponsoring Priory is not aiming at record-breaking attendances. The Priory gym holds barely 300 fans at one time.

Father Hugh Monmonier, O. S.B., athletic director at Priory explains the purpose of the tournament this way:

"All season, Priory, a school of 100, boys has had to compete in basketball against schools which have enrollments up to 500. Though we've asked no quarter, w feel that we've had to play out of our class.

"So we invited St. Anthony's and St. Paul's of Washington, DeMatha of Hyattsville, St. Mary's of Hagerstown, St. Mary's of Annapolis and St. John's of Frederick to take part in this tournament with us. They all have the same problem as ours. By competing in a round robin, we hope to cement relations between us.

"And when the tourney ends," said Father Hugh Monmonier yesterday, "the athletic heads of the seven schools will sit down and try to form a tight league of smaller schools around Washington for all sports."

Priory with 15-10, and St. Anthony's with 7-5, are the only teams which have better than .500 records. They are favorites to win the tournament.

DeMatha has drawn a bye in the first round Friday when a triple-header opens the tournament at Priory, 34th and South Dakota ave. ne. Hagerstown plays St. Paul's at 7 p. m., and Frederick follows against St. Anthony's, and Annapolis against Priory.

On Saturday at 7:30 p. m. the semifinals pit DeMatha against the winner of the first Friday game. Winners of the last two Friday games clash in the second semifinal Saturday night. The finals are set for Sunday at 3 p. m.

Winning and runner-up teams will receive a trophy. An all-tournament team, picked by Julian Colangelo, Tommy Nolan and Frank Marino.

Cup Committee Names Councilor

James A. Councilor yesterday was reelected general chairman of the President's Cup Regatta governing committee at a meeting held at the office of Edward C. Baltz, president of the Perpetual Building and Loan Association.

Baltz was also reelected president of the President's Cup Regatta Association. Other officers elected yesterday were Edgar C. Morris, vice president; Robert V. Fleming, treasurer; Hon. Oscar F. Chapman, Herbert F. Corn, L. Gordon Leech and William C. Shelton, directors-at-large; Admiral (ret.) H. G. Hamlet, executive secretary.

The President's Cup Regatta Association discussed plans for an indoor boat show for 1949 at the National Guard Armory. Exact dates for the September, 1948, regatta program, including swimming, power boat and sailboat races, will be set at a meeting early in April.

Turner's Card Adds Two Fights

Charlie "Sugar" Bunn, undefeated in 13 professional matches, and Red Gaddis, a local featherweight, who has won his last six bouts here, yesterday were added to Monday night's Turner's Arena card, headlined by an 8-rounder between Jimmy Cooper, the local bantamweight, and Joe Cardenas of Mexico City.

Bunn has been matched against McCoy Jones of Philadelphia. Gaddis engages Bobby Polowitzer of Hartford. Both are eight-rounders.

Virginia Highs Open Play Today

The Virginia High School Basketball Tournament opens today in Norfolk's Civic Center with John Marshall of Richmond, Newport News and George Washington of Alexandria seeded one-two-three.

Representing northern Virginia alongside G. W. will be unseeded Washington-Lee of Arlington.

W.-L. is expected to be the first team eliminated. The Ltlie Generals, with a 10-10 record, run headlong into tourney favorite John Marshall in the first game of an afternoon doubleheader today. Marshall has a 16-3 record, two of its losses coming against Staunton and Augusta Military Academies.

Washington-Lee, one of the smallest teams in the tourney, will bank on Zeke Zimmerman and Van Duley for most of its scoring.

GW Plays Lynchburg

George Washington, with a 17-4 record, completes the afternoon doubleheader against E. C. Glass High of Lynchburg. The Presidents will be led by Billy Rorer and Jake Dohner, All-Metropolitan Washington stars, and Buzzy Brown, member of the Virginia all-tournament team two years in a row.

Tonight's first-round doubleheader pits Newport News against Thomas Jefferson of Richmond and Granby of Norfolk, last year's champion, against Roanoke.

Winners of the afternoon games pair off in the first semifinal Friday night. Winners of the night games face off in the second semifinal Saturday night. Finals are slated for Saturday night.

Kavakos Joins Softball Loop

Kavakos Grill, Eastern regional softball champion for the past four years, will represent Washington in the six-city American Softball Conference this season.

The Grillmen, who were runners-up in the word championship tourney at Cleveland ast year, have been practicing for the past two weeks in the National Guard Armory.

Kavakos, at present, has no home field. Until it finds one, it will play all its games on the road. Other teams in the league are Bayonne, N. J., Stratford, Conn., Mineola, N. Y., North Plainfield, N. J., and Wilmington, De.

League play will be divided into two halves, with the winners of each half playing off for the championship at the end of the season. Kavakos opens its first half slate on May 16 at Bayonne.

Back from last year's team are Infielders Art Brasse, Tom Sullivan and Ray Love, Outfielders Bob Lamon, Bob Smith, Bob Heinbaug hand Art Boggs, Catcher Bill (Leggo) Lamb and Pitcher Jack (Cannonball) Smith. New candidates are Pitchers Freddy Kramer, Abe Levitan and Ben Harrell and Infielders John Mahaney and Jake Rosenbloom.

May 16, at Bayonne; 29, at Stratford; 30, at Mineola; 31, at North Plainfield.
June 2, at Wilmington; 6, at Bayonne; 12, at Stratford; 13, at Grumman; 16, at Wilmington; 20, at North Plainfield.

Recreation Fete Slated

Tonight will be Basketball Awards Night at Wilson High.

Six will be presented by the District Recreation Department to boys and girls whose basketball prowess has won them honors. There also will be three basketball games, each of which will settle a city championship.

Gordon Center will oppose Wilson Center for the 12-years-and-under city title in the opening game at 7 p. m.

Janney Center will meet Wilson Center in the second game for the Washington girls' championship. In the final contest, the Wilson All-Highs will play the Irving Food Shop, West End League champs, with no title at stake.

Following the second game, awards will be distributed to Recreation League champions in girls' senior, girls' indoors, girls' outdoors and boys' divisions.

Diplomas also will be given to those youngsters who attended all sessions of The Washington Post-Washington Capitols basketball clinic in January.

Williams Bout Talked for West

A nontitle boxing bout with Lightweight Champion Ike Williams will be sought for Washington's Sonny Boy West at Griffith Stadium this summer if West scores impressively over Charles "Cabey" Lewis in their scheduled 10-round boxing bout at Uline Arena Monday night.

Promoter Goldie Ahearn last night rounded out his supporting show that pits Al Wright against "Cyclone Roy" Williams, middleweights, in another 10; pairs Joe Gannon, local middleweight, vs. Torpedo Reed, Los Angeles, in a six, and John Arduini, District bantamweight, against Joe Bell, Philadelphia, in a five rounder.

300 See Film On New Army VD Approach

Its "moral" approach to venereal disease control, which replaces the old "shock" tactics, yesterday was demonstrated by the Army to local clergymen, educators and social workers.

A 39-minute training film, "Miracle of Livin.," which points up the pitfalls which promiscuous sexual relations create for family life, was shown to about 200 men and women at the Departmental Auditorium.

Through such methods, which "make men think," the Army recently announced it has been able to cut venereal disease incidence in the Army by 40 per cent within the past year.

Pronounced A Hit

Those who viewed the film, first of a proposed series, yesterday, were unanimous in pronouncing it a "hit."

"I wish that I had been able to have it on my ship," declared the Rev. Robert J. Plumb, rector of St. Mark's Episcopal Church and wartime Navy chaplain aboard the battleship Wyoming.

"This is far superior to anything I've seen," he said. "I wish a way could be found for civilians to see it too."

During World War I and most of World War II, the Army's approach to venereal disease control consisted primarily of stressing the need for prophylaxis once infection was obtained through illicit relations, or attempting to shock recruits by showing them "horrible examples" of infected men and women.

First Aid Provided

In some camps during the last war, when films were displayed showing extreme examples of advanced venereal disease infection, first-aid men were ordered to stand by to revive recruits overcome by what were often nauseating examples.

Army Secretary Kenneth C Royall told yesterday's audience. "We have totally rejected the old view that it wasn't the duty of the Army to chaperone its members.

"A man to who mthe moral appeal is successful" he said, "is valuable to the Army not only because he avoids VD, but we have learned that men of character are the best soldiers."

Produced by professionals at the Army Signal Corps Center at Astoria, Long Island, "Miracle of Living" has been shown outside the Army to a few small civilian groups.

President Thanks Business for Help In Selling Bonds

President Truman said yesterday he was pleased to note that "business and Government can cooperate when the welfare of the country is at stake."

He made the statement in an informal talk with some 60 representatives of the National Retail Dry Goods Association. The retailers, who are cooperating in the new Government bond-selling drive which gets under way April 15, visited the White House with Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder.

"I cannot thank you ladies and gentlemen enough," Mr. Truman said, "for having undertaken to inform the people that the savings bonds of the United States Government are the best investment in the world—and particularly . . . at this time."

He added that "the occasion is the more pleasing to me because it gives me a chance to say to you that business and Government can cooperate when the welfare of the country is at stake."

The bond drive, which will continue until June 30, has been officially designated "the security loan" campaign.

Bill to Waive Bar Exams Stirs Battle

A bill to waive bar examinations here for veterans of the last war was attacked and defeated yesterday in a hearing before a House District Subcommitte headed by Representative Joseph P. O'Hara (R., Minn.).

The bill, generally, would permit admission to the District Bar of veterans who are otherwise qualified and who served two years during the war, and for disabled veterans whose service was less than two years.

Opponents of the plan included the District Commissioners, the Committee on Admissions and Grievances of the District Court, and the District and American Bar Associations.

Witnesses urging passage included Representative Kenneth B. Keating (R., N. Y.), author of the bill; individual Washington veterans and spokesmen for the District Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Attorney James J. Laughlin, also supporting the bill, protested the present system of paying members of the District Court's Committee on Admissions and Grievances for their services, and declared the Attorney General should sue to recover the payments for the Government. He suggested the District Bar examinations be under the United States Court of Appeals here.

Elizabeth to 'Rule' During Absence Of King George

London, March 10 (AP).—Princess Elizabeth will get her first big chance to "rule" the British Empire when her parents visit Australia and New Zealand early next year.

She will head a Council of State, comprising four or five members, chosen to act for the King while he, Queen Elizabeth and Princess Margaret Rose are abroad.

As next in line to the throne, Elizabeth will serve as senior member of the council. She sat on such a royal panel once before, but only briefly, in the summer of 1944 when her father made a wartime visit to Italy. She was then only a few months past her eighteenth birthday, legal age for royal heirs.

Miller Files New D. C. Sex Offense Bill

Representative A. L. Miller (R., Nebr.) yesterday introduced a revised House bill to deal with sex offenses in the District.

Miller explained that the bill had been rewritten mainly to emphasize the medical rather than the criminal approach in dealing with sexual psychopaths.

The sexual psychopath provisions, he said, were redrafted to permit voluntary admissions to St. Elizabeths Hospital, and to permit the United States Attorney to undertake proceedings to have sexual psychopaths sent to St. Elizabeths for treatment, when no criminal offense is involved, and with careful safeguards for protecting the rights of individuals.

Miller said he would call an early meeting, possibly this week, of his House District subcommittee to discuss the revised bill.

No major changes have been made in another main section of the bill calling for sharply increased penalties for sex offenses, particularly for those involving children.

Miller said that other changes in the measure were largely technical.

Assistant Unted States Attorney Sidney S. Sachs helped in drafting the revised bill.

Policeman Thrown Over Rail at Dance

Baltimore, March 10 (AP).—A patrolman was dropped nine feet off the bleachers early today, police said, during a "melee" at a Negro dance in he 104th Regiment Armory.

Magistrate Preston A. Pairo, said white Patrolman Bernard Sandkhuler was pitched over the bleacher railing by one of the dancers. The officer was hospitalized for head and back injuries.

Elmer Burley, 23, was held in $2500 bail on charges of assaulting a policeman and inciting a riot. Seven others were fined for disorderly conduct.

Police reported the crowd of 2160 dancers rioted, but Magistrate Pairo said later the "considerable confusion" did not "actually reach the proportions of a riot."

Two shots were fired during the 20-minute "melee," and a woman who had been jitterbugging at the party was found critically slashed four blocks away some time later. She is in critical condition.

Pairo said details were not clear because the injured patrolman was unable to appear in Police Court today to give his story.

William Moore, 28, was fined $10 and costs for disorderly conduct in attempting to prevent police from taking Mrs. Moore to the hospital.

Pairo said she had apparently been slashed by a man she had argued with at the dance but that it was not clear whether she had been stabbed at the armory or somewere else.

Sheriff Assails Conditions in Frederick Jail

Frederick, Md., March 10 (Spl.). The Frederick County Commissioners and their predecessors were criticized today for allegedly "deplorable" conditions in the county jail, almshouse and county office building.

In an outline of problems faced recently by his office, Sheriff Guy Anders called the commissioners "politicians who have been afraid to take the bull by the horns" and charged hey have failed to alter conditions in the three public buildings because they have been "scared of the voters."

Sheriff Anders laid principal blame on former members of the board of commissioners, asserting "as far back as I can remember the commissioners have been afraid to do anything to remedy the deplorable conditions at the jail, the Montevue almshouse and Wincheser Hall." Winchester Hall, purchased from private interests, is now being used as a county office building.

The sheriff also lashed out at parents in the county for a sharp upward trend in juvenile delinquency. Unless more rigid discipline is exercised over children, he declared, "this county will face the greatest moral catastrophe we've ever seen."

Greatest factor in the increase in youthful crimes, Sheriff Anders said, is the fact that "too many parents are so eagerly seeking their own freedom and their own 'rights' they have no time for family responsibilities.

Arlington Set To Fight for School Site

Action neared yesterday in Arlington County's bid for the 4-acre plot in North Fairlington it hopes to use for a school site.

Commonwealth's Attorney Denman Rucker said he has advised the county school board to (1) negotiate for the title, and if that fails, (2) take the court action to obtain the land.

Arlington School Board Chairman Barnard Joy said yesterday he had asked School Superintendent Fletcher Kemp to begin negotiations with the Fairmac Corp., owners of the development.

14-Room School Planned

Erection of a school in North Fairlington had been approved by the old school board last October. A 14-room school at a cost of $441,000 is planned.

But since October, school officials say they have been unable to contact the out-of-town owners of the housing development to arrange for the title.

Commonwealth's Attorney Rucker said that as things stand, a "cloud" hangs over the school site title.

On the Fairlington plat recorded by the Defense Homes Corp., former Fairlington owners, Rucker said the plot had been marked as a "school site."

Failed to Specify Site

But since DHC did not specify the land for a "public school site," Rucker added, it will be necessary "to establish the intent of Defense Homes Corp."

If the Government agency had earmarked the 4 acres for a public school in the plat, Rucker said, the county "would not encounter much difficulty" in getting title.

If amicable negotiations with Fairmac Corp. fail, the Commonwealth's attorney stated, Arlington has a "sufficient basis for filing a suit to determine whether or not a public trust has been created."

Found Brother Missing 37 Years, Hurley Says

Santa Fe., N. M., March 10 (AP).—Patrick J. Hurley said today that a brother believed killed in Mexico 37 years ago has been found alive.

The former ambassador to China said his brother, William Hurley, was located on a ranch near Marysville, Calif.

"I am satisfied it is my brother," Hurley said after talking with him by telephone last night.

Postlude

Six Opera Singers in Benefit

By Paul Hume

It was a grand benefit, for a great cause. Six Metropolitan Opera singers filled Constitution Hall last night, singing most of the favorites of the standard operatic repertoire. They sang to a brilliant house, led by Mrs. Truman and Margaret.

Licia Albanese, Stella Roman, Rise Stevens, Kurt Baum, Robert Merrill, and Salvatore Baccaloni sang for two and a half hours (with time out for applause and intermission).

Greatest single star of the whole thing was Dick Marzollo, who played absolutely perfect accompaniments for the sextet, moving from singer to singer and style to style with ease and complete authority. His work in a medium always difficult for piano was marvelous.

All this was to assist the Washington Committee of American Friends for Italian Aid, and they must have been happy with the generous response of the artists, who gave their services, and of the audience which showed its constant joy at the proceedings.

The singing varied throughout the evening, but Licia Albanese and Robert Merrill gave us opera as it used to be sung in the finest days of its history. They were ably seconded by Salvatore Baccaloni, who is a rare artist in the realm of comic singing. For sheer fun of the not too subtle kind, it was swell.

Kurt Baum did well in several of the most popular tenor arias. We do not wish to seem unappreciative of any artists as generous as last night's, but both Miss Stevens and Miss Roman contributed little that was not quite ordinary, and more than once, rather bad singing.

Flood Control Group Holds First Session

First meeting of the Upper Potomac Flood Control Survey Commission of Maryland was held yesterday at University of Maryland.

The coommission considered information on assets and problems of the commission which has as its object planning of flood control measures in the Upper Potomac basin.

Earlier studies made by the United States Soil Conservation Service, the United States Forestry Service and the Army Corps of Engineers have been made available to the commission.

The commission will endeavor to decide extent of flood damage on the Potomac to its mouth, methods of preventing and whether such methods are economically feasible. It also will attempt to correlate the work of the various agencies engaged in similar work.

John B. Funk, chairman, was authorized to name a subcommittee to prepare a program for the next meeting of the commission.

Economists See 'Danger' in Steel Boosts

White House economists yesterday brought President Truman this investigation report: The recent steel price increases are "potentially dangerous" but it's too early to measure their impact on inflation.

Chairman Edwin G. Nourse, of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, gave that sketchy summary to a reporter as he delivered a council report to Mr. Truman. He did not elaborate. Nourse said the President would make the report public.

On Secretary of Commerce Harriman's desk was another report, to be sent shortly to Mr. Truman. It is strictly a facts-and-figures study of steel prices and profits. But a spokesman said it might be interpreted as meaning:

"The actual cost of the steel price increase is relatively small. The major danger is the psychological effect in business."

The Justice Department, it was learned, already has reported to Mr. Truman on the anti-trust phase of a three-agency Federal investigation ordered by Mr. Truman last month.

$3500 Fine Imposed In Hotel Overcharge

Norfolk, Va., March 10 (AP).—Victor H. Miller, operator of the Beachome Apartment Hotel, Virginia Beach, today was fined $3500 in United States District Court for overcharging his tenants.

In imposing the fine, Judge Sterling Hutcheson overruled a motion that a jury verdict of last May be set aside and a judgment of acquittal entered.

Miller was convicted on 10 counts of overcharging for renting accommodations during the 1946 summer season at rates above control levels.

Delegates Pass Bill on Va. Poll Tax

Richmond, Va., March 10 (((Spl.).—The House of Delegates today approved action of the 1946 Assembly toward a referendum next November on the Virginia poll tax.

The measure would submit the poll tax question to voters along with a proposed new system of voting registration.

It was passed in its original 1946 form, but only after efforts to amend it to referendum on the poll tax alone were defeated. The 1946 resolution must be approved by both House and Senate in identical form to become effective in November.

It now goes to the Senate for action.

Spearheading opposition to the resolution in the House was Delegate Robert Whitehead of Nelson, who attacked it as an "awkward, cumbersome and left-handed way" to submit poll tax repeal to the public. He charged that complexities of the proposed new system to replace the poll tax would "discourage voting."

In other legislative action today the Senate Finance Committee revived and reported out favorably a bill which would permit Arlington County to levy a local tax on auto and truck licenses. Yesterday, the committee had passed the measure by, an action which ordinarily kills such bills.

Revived at the request of its sponsors, Arlington Delegate J. Maynard Magruder and George Damm, the bill was reconsidered by the committee, and voted out 10 to 3.

The committee also reported out a resolution calling for appointment of a commission to study the seafoor industry in Virginia.

Among other committee actions, the Moncure bill to permit special officers or special county police to make arrests without warrants while serving in uniform and displaying badges was killed today by the Senate committee on courts of justice. The vote was 6 to 4.

Youth Reaches U.S. in Air Race Against Death

San Francisco, March 10 (AP).—Ernest McLaughlin, 17, reached San Francisco by plane today in his race against death from Australia to Baltimore.

The boy is suffering from leukemia, a blood disease. Australian doctors said his only hope is in tregatment at Johns Hopkins Hospital—and that he must arrive there by March 22. The boy also is deaf and dumb.

McLaughlin, accompanied by his mother and a nurse, was granted free air passage from Australia to San Francisco by British Commonwealth Pacific Airways. He will proceed eastward by train tonight. His father is a factory worker in Sydney.

FOR BEST SERVICE PLACE YOUR ADS EARLY
The steadily growing volume of classified ads in The Post, combined with the practice of many advertisers who phone late in the day, is making it difficult to devote the time and assistance to these late callers which is needed to prepare the most effective possible copy.
To assure receiving this help from your ad-taker, please try to call during the morning or early afternoon.

3-Man CAB Decisions Questioned

By The Associated Press

The Postoffice Department and Colonial Airlines Tuesday asked the Civil Aeronautics Board to stay its new air service awards in the so-called Middle Atlantic area case.

Colonial raised the point that the case was decided by a three-member board which was not unanimous on some of the awards. CAB normally has five members, but two board seats are currently vacant. Colonial demanded that "a full board" review the decisions.

Postmaster General Jesse M. Donaldson said in a separate petition that "the order in question lacks legal finality" and that new airline expenditures should not be authorized until it is established that the awards will not be modified or invalidated.

Sigmund Janas, Colonial president, asserted in a statement that he hopes Congress will "investigate the chaotic conditions now existing at CAB." He spoke of "current inept functioning of this agency."

In the Middle Atlantic case, decided February 20, CAB gave additional routes to six trunk-line carriers and authorized various new feeder-line routes in the area between Norfolk, Va.; Providence R. I.; Buffalo, N. Y. and Cincinnati, Ohio.

Colonial complained in its petition that the examiner who held six weeks of headings a year ago recommended Colonial operations between New York, Philadelphia and Washington. The final decision ruled this route out on the votes of board members Oswald Ryan and Harllee Branch, with board member Josh Lee dissenting.
